Smilingly Observes He Could Not Very Well Write Story of Parley.

By FREDERICK A. STORM,

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Nov. 29. (UP)—President Roosevelt tonight indicated the United States would not resume normal diplomatic relations with Germany until he is convinced the Nazi government will cease persecution of religious, racial and political minorities.

This policy was interpreted from Mr. Roosevelt's statement to newspapermen that Ambassador Hugh Wilson, whom the President recently recalled from Berlin, was not going back to Germany now. The President would not say when Wilson would be returned to Berlin.

Dismisses Questions. The chief executive, during a 20-minute press conference, dismissed all other questions concerning his recent conferences with Wilson and William Phillips, ambassador to Italy. He smiled and observed that even if he should be called upon to write a story of the meeting, he could not very well do it.

Mr. Roosevelt, sitting behind the driving wheel of his touring automobile on a covey Warm Springs road for the press conference, said he would renew his talks with Wilson and Phillips as soon as he returned to Washington. These discussions, which will consist of exchanges of information and a canvass of the problem of minority persecutions abroad in the light of latest developments, are expected to occur between December 6 and 9.

Phillips Sails Dec. 10. Phillips is scheduled to sail for Rome December 10.

White House attaches said the President, Wilson and Phillips, in their two conferences here, had discussed every phase of the campaigns of totalitarian governments against racial and religious minority groups.

Mr. Roosevelt was expected to turn temporarily from international problems and devote the major portion of the remainder of his stay in Warm Springs to study and to drafting an outline of the administration's new legislative program.

The President said he would see Speaker William Bankhead next Thursday.

Five Missing, Two Rescued
After Plane Lands in Pacific

Too Good Radio Reception
Blamed for Ship Getting Off Course.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 29. (AP)—Five persons slipped into the rough Pacific ocean and disappeared today after a luxury liner of the United Air Lines panicked to the water, out of gasoline.

Two others, including the pilot, escaped to the shore before the land ship was crushed against the rocky coast in an accident attributed variously to gales and too good radio reception.

An ironic twist of the tragedy developed many hours later when investigators and news photographers entered the cabin of the plane, rocking in the surf on the stony beach, and found it quite dry. Some officials expressed belief all might have been saved had they remained inside.

Coast guardsmen tonight abandoned hope of finding any of the five missing persons alive and terminated their day-long search.

The victims disappeared, one by one, after the transport was brought down safely on the water shortly before dawn 35 miles north of San Francisco.

Three persons were known to have reached shore, but one of them, the only woman aboard, was swept back into the boiling surf when she dodged the swinging wing of the plane.

The only known survivors were Charles Stead, veteran 42-year-old pilot, and Passenger Isadore Edelstein, 51, a paroled Washington state convict on his way to Honolulu to start life anew.

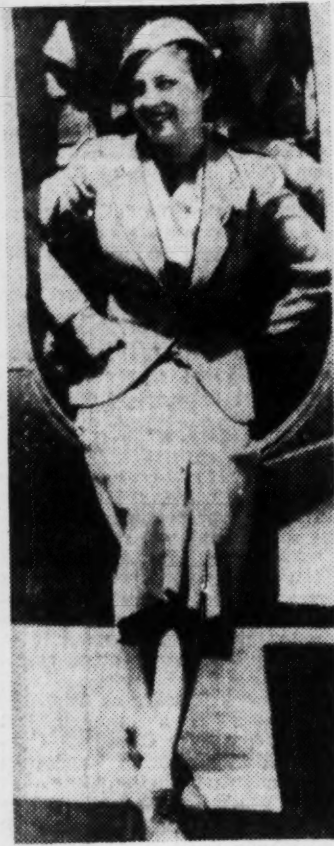

Missing after a day-long search by plane and boat were:

Phillip Hart, 52, president of the Pacific Bridge Company, Portland, Ore.

Sydney L. Shonts, San Jose, Cal., engineer.

Ivan B. Hefflbower, San Francisco bond broker.

Frono Clay, 24, stewardess, of

Stewardess Clay

Alameda, Cal.
Co-Pilot Lloyd Jones, 30, Seattle.

The plane was forced down when gasoline was exhausted in five and a half hours of flying from Medford, Ore. The flight normally takes two hours and 40 minutes.

United Air Lines officials explained Stead was forced off his course by winds reaching a velocity of 65 or 70 miles an hour and a "cold front"—an atmospheric condition.

Stead, himself, said he had no trouble with the weather but "radio reception was too good. There were so many signals coming in it was difficult to pick out the right ones." Because of this, he explained.

NAZIS THREATEN
MASS SLAYINGS

Blackshirt Guard Organ
Warns Against Attempt
on Life of Any Official.

BERLIN, Nov. 29. (UP)—Das Schwarze Korps, official organ of Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's elite black-shirt guards, tonight warned that all German Jews would die in mass killings if any attempt were made to assassinate Hitler or any other Nazi leader.

The stormtroop organ, which already has predicted the "actually fatal extermination of German Jewry by fire and sword" if any remain in the Reich after completion of the anti-Semitic drive, coupled its new warning with a violent attack on President Roosevelt and the United States.

"On the day on which a Jewish weapon or a weapon bought by Jews is used against one of the leading men of Germany then there will be no more Jews in Germany," Das Schwarze Korps said, adding:

"We hope we have made ourselves clear."

The warning was in retort to a "letter to the editor" of the New York Daily News, appearing recently over the name of an American Jew who suggested that a group of criminals be released from prison in the United States and sent to Germany to wipe out Hitler's Nazi hierarchy.

"The newspaper made this proposal its own by publishing it without commentary and the American government neither banned nor reprimanded the newspaper," Das Schwarze Korps said. "It did not even declare that it deplored either the proposal itself or the attitude of the newspaper."

Men Representing $20,000,000,000 in Southern Industry Meet Here To Thrash Out Problems.

'SAVE DEMOCRACY' IS MAJOR MOTIF

Press Is Neither Venal, Emascuated Nor Cowardly, Parley Is Told.

Excessive government regulation came in for severe condemnation yesterday as men who represent $20,000,000,000 of invested capital in the south gathered in Atlanta to thrash out some of their problems.

Appeals for the preservation of democracy also figured prominently in the business symposium sponsored by the Southern States Industrial Council. Business leaders from 15 southern states attended.

Men prominent in a number of fields—agriculture, education, transportation and labor—addressed the group and outlined their ideas for solving many of the problems confronting business and industry today.

Edward J. McMillan, president of the Standard Knitting Mills, of Knoxville, was elected the president of the council. S. L. Durham, of Louisville, Ky., was named treasurer, and Charles C. Gilfert, of Nashville, secretary.

In accepting the presidency McMillan declared "the future of the south lies in its industrial development."

James G. Stahlman, publisher and president of the Nashville Banner, listed the bulwarks of democracy as "the guaranty of free speech, a free press, the right of assembly, freedom of learning and freedom of conscience."

He declared the daily newspapers are still the primary news disseminators and, likewise, the most powerful agencies of public opinion in America.

Efforts have been made, he said, and will continue to be made to "fetter the American press." He cited "efforts at governmental regulation and license, excessive taxation, legislative suppression, official suppression, attempted bribery and corruption and murder."

"The press of this country is not venal or emascuated," Stahlman said.

Mobile Guards Block Street After Ousting Strikers

MRS. GUYOL TRIAL
WILL START TODAY

Clayton Sheriff and His Deputies Are Indicted on Charges of Extortion.

Trial of Mrs. Eddie Guyol and nine other persons on lottery charges is expected to get under way this morning before Judge James C. Davis, of Clayton superior court, Solicitor General Roy Leathers, said last night.

The solicitor also announced that it is "his intention to dispose of all indictments brought by the grand jury, during the present term of court."

In this connection, Leathers said the grand jury which has been conducting a sweeping investigation of vice and gambling conditions in Clayton county, including the returning of indictments against Sheriff E. L. Adamson and Deputy Sheriff J. O. Thompson, adjourned yesterday afternoon.

Leathers said a bench warrant had been issued for Mrs. Guyol, widow of the slain lottery king, as she was believed to be in Florida. The others, he added, have "had plenty of time to prepare for trial."

Sheriff Adamson and Deputy Sheriff Thompson were indicted on extortion charges, a misdemeanor, on complaint of Walter Anderson, owner of amusement devices, and his attorney, H. A. Allen.

Postmaster
'Too Dumb,' Keeps Cash

Thought Office Was His Own Business, Advertised Stamps.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29. (UP)—William H. Dunmeyer, 46-year-old postmaster of Atlantic Beach, N. Y., accused of embezzling postal funds, told a federal court today that he had supposed the post office was "his own little business," and had pocketed the postal funds as profit.

Judge Robert A. Inch gave him a suspended sentence of a year and a day in jail after Dunmeyer's attorney, Maxwell Shapiro, said his client was "too stupid to keep one simple ledger."

According to Assistant U. S. Attorney John Starkey, Dunmeyer had first run his postoffice on irregular hours because "business demands" didn't justify full-time operation.

Later he decided to move the post office to a "better business location," painted the new place at his own expense and put on an advertising campaign in an effort to boom stamp sales.

Federal auditors discovered that he was using the income to pay off a mortgage on his home, and Dunmeyer was indicted on a charge of embezzling $1,230 of government funds.

Judge Inch agreed that Dunmeyer was "too stupid" to know what he was doing and said the "people who appointed him" were to blame for his troubles.

CALCUTTA, Nov. 29. (AP)—The German Condor plane en route from Berlin to Tokyo passed over Calcutta at 8:27 p. m., Greenwich time (3:27 p. m., E. S. T.) today.

The four-motored Focke-Wulf ship was expected to make its next stop at Hanoi, French Indo-China. Previous stops had been made at Karachi, India, and Basra, Iraq, on the 9,300-mile flight. The airline distance from Calcutta to Hanoi is approximately 1,200 miles.

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 29. (AP)—William C. Bullitt, U. S. ambassador to France, has decided to shorten his Nassau vacation, it became known today when he made reservations with Pan American Airways to return here tomorrow.

He also requested connecting air reservations to Atlanta, leading to a supposition here that he might be planning to visit President Roosevelt at Warm Springs.

When the ambassador flew to Nassau last week he said he intended to stay there two weeks.

TURNER IS SOUGHT
IN CITY HIDEOUT

Police Fear New Wave of Banditry With Smith and Associate on 'Loose.'

With Forrest Turner and Aubrey Smith, notorious escapes, believed hiding in Atlanta, city detectives and police yesterday expressed pessimism about the future and frankly admitted they had little to go on which might result in capture of the pair.

Detective Superintendent J. A. McKibben disclosed, however, that known Atlanta haunts of Turner are being watched while there is increasing vigilance for the equally-elusive Smith.

Turner escaped Monday from the state prison farm at Tattnall, and Smith fled from the state prison farm at Milledgeville last October 3.

"Turner has friends in Atlanta, and there are many places where he is known to hang out or hide out," said McKibben. "But this knowledge isn't of much help because he is one of the most slippery men we've ever encountered."

As for the future, McKibben said a "new wave of banditry is likely," and that the holiday season might prove to be "pretty tough on law enforcement officers."

McKibben said he felt sure that Smith has been in Atlanta since his escape, that he knows Turner and there is a possibility the pair may join forces.

"A lot of holdups have been charged to Smith," he said, "which I don't think he had anything to do with. But I am convinced he is within 'visiting' distance, and has popped in and out of this city."

Turner is well known to police here. His crime career includes automobile thefts, burglary and armed robbery, his record dating back to 1928. Turner was arrested here March 7, 1937, by Detectives Leo Nahlik and M. M. Coppenger and sent to the Troup county chain gang. He was later transferred to Tattnall.

CRISIS TO CENTER
IN RAILROAD FIELD

Paralysis of Industry Regarded as Inevitable During 24-Hour Strike.

PARIS (Wednesday), Nov. 30. (UP)—The government ran the first strike-breaking train out of Paris at 4:12 a. m. today with a conscripted military crew, protected by soldiers, when the "zero hour" of France's 24-hour general strike arrived with the nation under virtual army rule.

The engineer and fireman in the cab, asked if they intended to ignore the General Labor Confederation's strike order to 5,000,000 workers, said:

"Hell yes, we're going; we're in the army now."

Ring Labor Districts. Thousands of troops and mobile guards, including machine-gun and light artillery units, moved through almost deserted streets in a clear dawn and threw cordons of steel around labor-class districts, public buildings and vital public utility plants.

The troops were under orders to deal sternly with any violence or sabotage during the nation-wide one-day strike in protest against Premier Edouard Daladier's recovery decrees, particularly his "tampering" with the 40-hour week.

At Army Pay. Daladier hoped that by defeating the walkout of 525,000 railway men by calling them to the colors at army pay he could break the backbone of the "folded arms" demonstration by labor.

The strike, beginning at midnight, was ushered in by violence and rioting in the northern industrial region.

The first "militarized" train, which left the Saint Lazare station at 4:12, headed toward Nantes. Three policemen guarded the locomotive, troops were hidden in the station interior and soldiers helped load the baggage car.

The government had warned the railroad workers that if they struck they would face punishment ranging up to five months imprisonment for violation of Daladier's military requisition decrees, applying to the six nationalized railroad lines, subways, bus lines and vital utilities.

Trains were made up and loaded.

ORPORATION, NEW YORK

BRITAIN, FRANCE SPEED SPENDING FOR ARMAMENTS

Sir John Simon Asks
Unlimited Borrowing
Powers; 32 Per Cent
Hike Studied in Paris.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Britain and France, already tied together in a close military agreement, prepared simultaneously today for heavy arms spending.

Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, told the British house of commons he wanted to borrow an unspecified sum next year for armaments, in addition to the 400,000,000 pounds ($1,860,000,000) loan authorized by the 1938 defense loan act.

The finance committee of the French chamber of deputies was studying next year's budget, which included a proposed 32 per cent increase in armaments expenditures. The budget estimate of the cost of national defense was 39,741,000,000 francs ($1,046,000,000).

Large Increase.

This was termed officially an increase of 9,600,000,000 francs ($252,000,000) over 1938.

In London, commons appeared willing to give Sir John a blank check for any amount he wished to borrow, even though he has 220,000,000 pounds left over from the last 400,000,000 pounds.

Britons are paying a 27 1-2 per cent income tax and high levies on necessities and some criticized the government for hiking taxes instead of spending the borrowed money.

It still was undisclosed how much Sir John intends to spend on arms but the present rate of purchases is about 1,000,000 pounds ($4,650,000) a day.

Moreover, the chancellor of the exchequer may never spend the proposed borrowing on arms. He may just "intend" to spend it. Such an intention would be as good as actuality if and when Britain, France, Germany and Italy sit down to talk disarmament.

"In view of further expenditure on defense preparations now contemplated," Sir John told commons, "I have come to the conclusion that some further borrowing powers will be needed and it is my intention at the appropriate time next year to ask parliament to pass legislation for this purpose."

The new budget will be presented next March.

Kennedy did not elaborate on this phase of his remarks, but stressed the influence of international union of such agreements as the Anglo-United States trade pact, which he described as "the greatest commercial agreement of all time."

TROLLEY REROUTING BEING CONSIDERED

Plan Would Do Away With Loop on Broad and Marietta Streets.

Furthering its campaign to reduce traffic fatalities in the city through the inauguration of a broad accident prevention program, the Atlanta citizens' traffic committee yesterday afternoon considered a proposal to reroute the Inman Park, Georgia avenue and Lakewood cars along Pryor street, thereby doing away with the loop at Broad and Marietta streets.

Suggested by the committee at a recent meeting, the plan has the approval of the Georgia Public Service Commission and the police department. W. R. Pollard, manager of the traffic division of the Georgia Power Company, announced the company was prepared to route the Inman Park car north along Pryor street, with the Georgia avenue and Lakewood cars proceeding south along the same street, after crossing Marietta street.

One Way on Piedmont.

Considered also was the advisability of asking that Piedmont avenue, south from Twelfth street, be included among one-way streets to be requested of city council. Selected already for one-way thoroughfares are Spring street, for southbound traffic, and Juniper and Courtland for northbound traffic. The drive for one-way streets as a means of relieving traffic congestion is part of a four-point program being prepared by the committee and which includes synchronization of traffic lights, elimination of angle parking and the establishment of one traffic court.

Chairman George Van Horn Moseley announced election of three new directors and appointment of an executive committee and five special committees.

Officials of Zoo End Punishment For Killer Bear

CLEVELAND, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Zoo officials decided today to end "punishment" of Silver, 600-pound Polar bear who dragged a young artist into a cage several weeks ago and nearly clawed her to death.

Since the incident, Silver's keeper said, the bear has been pelted by visitors with rocks, sticks, pieces of concrete and tobacco tins. So today she was moved to a new cage where two rows of bars and a heavy wire grating separate her from visitors. At night she is locked up to foil possible poisoners.

The artist, 21-year-old Julia Zemnick, is recovering from her wounds.

TRAIN IS STRAFED

BY INSURGENT PLANES

MADRID, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Insurgent air raiders attacked a passenger train in government Spain today and killed eight persons and wounded 50, including 19 women and children.

Several insurgent planes attacked the train, which was running between Jaen and Lcaudete in southern Spain. Sniping down upon it near the Martos station, they machine-gunned it heavily.

Some terrified passengers leaped from the windows and fled into the fields, only to be pursued by the raiders, reports said.

ed, he was unable to follow his radio beam to Oakland, across San Francisco bay.

"Everybody was calm" when the plane was put down on the water, Stead said.

"We all went through the hatch," added Edelstein as he was lifted aboard a coast guard cutter to be taken to a hospital for treatment of a broken knee cap. "I helped some up."

"One by one the rest of the people disappeared from the top of the plane," Edelstein continued. "Only the captain and I were left. Then a wave came and I fell in. I went down twice."

"I hollered to him to help me and the captain reached down and helped me back on the wing. Then we both were washed off, but managed to fight our way to shore."

There the white combers lapped at their feet and a 30-foot cliff towered above them.

Near them, Stead said he saw Miss Clay seated on a rock. A wave whipped the shattered remnant of the plane toward her. She ducked, to escape it, and slipped back into the sea and disappeared.

Nash, who reported he fired just as the negro was about to shoot Radio Patrolman H. A. Beatty as the officers sought to break up a fight. The negro was admitted to Grady hospital.

Fight over a woman resulted yesterday in the death at Grady hospital of Charlie Crowe, 35, negro, of a Hardie street address, from hatchet wounds of the head. He was found in a house on McLain street. L. Alexander, negro, of an Acton street address, was arrested in connection with the case.

'NO ROOM FOR LENI,' SAYS TRADE PAPER

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 29.—(AP)—"There is no room in Hollywood for Leni Riefenstahl, head of the Nazi film industry," screamed a paid advertisement in a movie trade publication today as the German actress moved her luggage into a Beverly Hills hotel and started to see the sights.

At the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League office, officers said the advertisement (in Daily Variety) was paid for by the executive board, headed by Chairman Donald Ogden Stewart, writer. Leni was out all day enjoying what she called southern California's "fantastic climate."

Operation Success Before Completion

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Part of a blind man's eye today brought sight to a woman for the first time in 16 years even before the delicate operation of transplanting cornea was completed.

"I can see your hand!" exclaimed Mrs. Mary Lee Bode while the surgeon stitched the cornea in place.

The surgeon was reluctant to consider the operation a success immediately.

IRISH CUSTOM HUTS WRECKED BY BLASTS

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, Nov. 29.—(UP)—A series of landmine explosions tonight wrecked customs huts at various points along the Eire-Northern Ireland border.

No casualties were reported. The explosions occurred simultaneously. Among the huts wrecked—all on the Northern Ireland side of the border—were those at Carrick Armon on the main Dundalk Newry road, at Ferryhill and between Greenore and Newry and Killen and Belleek.

HAS THE SOUTH LAGGED ECONOMICALLY?

One of the main causes of the more or less unfavorable reaction in the south to that report on "the nation's No. 1 economic problem" was because it tended to convey the impression little or no progress had been made; that the south was blissfully, or otherwise, dozing over its economic opportunities.

In a pamphlet entitled "A Pattern for Southern Progress" the Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Company points out that although a tremendous job still lies ahead, of which the people are not unmindful, excellent progress already has been made, when it is remembered the whole section lay prostrate in the spring of 1865. That condition, however, although it meant starting from "scratch," should be no longer offered as a reason and is no longer needed as an excuse for lagging, since the section recovered from that catastrophe, economically, some 25 years ago.

On the other side of the picture the south was rich in natural resources at the close of the war. Yet, despite the vast quantities of these raw products already turned to economic use, the south is still in possession of 40 per cent of the nation's forests, 20 per cent of its coal, 27 per cent of its hydroelectric projects, 66 per cent of its crude oil, more than 66 per cent of its natural gas, 99 per cent of its sulphur and practically all of the nation's naval stores. It was largely because of these allegedly undeveloped resources the section was said to be taking an economic nap.

But, as an indication the south is very much awake and moving steadily forward, it is pointed out in the pamphlet that for the 25 years from 1910 to 1935 industry expanded more rapidly in the south than in the United States as a whole. The south increased its manufacturing over 210 per cent as against 110 per cent for the whole nation. As against other sections the increase was even greater.

Crop diversification has been advanced for years as one of the essentials necessary to putting southern farming on a sounder economic basis. The value of tobacco, a substitute for cotton, was $75,000,000 in 1910. The crop brought $215,787,000 in 1935. The value of other crops, not including cotton, was $710,985,000 in 1910. Twenty-five years later these other crops brought the southern farmer $1,157,000,000!

Livestock, long considered a natural development in the south because of favorable climate and availability of native feeds, showed an encouraging increase between 1910 and 1935. In 1910 the south owned 26 per cent of the nation's livestock. By 1935 it had increased to 31 per cent. This progress will continue for the reason southern farmers, particularly those in Georgia, are alive to the advantages of livestock development.

While the bank resources in the United States, as a whole, increased only 2 1-2 per cent during the past two years, the increase in the south was over 5 per cent. During the same period bank clearings in the nation as a whole increased 9 per cent while southern bank clearings improved over 14 per cent.

Nothing could indicate more forcefully the growth of economic wealth than comparative figures on the assessed value of taxable property. In 1910 $9,000,000,000 represented the total assessed value of all southern property for taxation. In 1937 this figure had grown to $18,000,000,000—an increase of 100 per cent.

The rebuilding of a nation, as the people of the south well know, is no overnight job to be accomplished by the adoption of a few hastily conceived cures prescribed on a college campus. Although thoroughly amenable to real progress, the south feels that a quickly filled prescription for all southern ills might prove to be a more incurable affliction than the alleged disease.

A New Hampshire college combines Portland cement and sawdust in a material which may be sawed and nailed, and should in time supersede the drugstore meat loaf.

Yoo-hoo, Mr. Dies—here's something. A tinge of pink is discovered on many of the new Jefferson nickels.

It is too early to say that Chamberlain failed at Munich. Still, remembering Haile Selassie, the form players aren't betting on anyone with an umbrella.

What's the rule about the kind of winter to expect after a hard November summer?

JAPANESE FINANCING

While the troublous international pendulum has been swinging westward over Germany, there has been some inclination to forget the disturbance in China. Although Japan claims to have the situation well in hand—so much so she thinks it safe to tell the United States to forget the "open door" policy—no less than 200,000 guerrillas are openly operating between Shanghai and Nanking, a distance of only 200 miles. Multiply this by 5 or 6 and a better understanding may be had of the military task Japan has undertaken.

Disturbing as this undoubtedly is, it is probably the economic problem which is destined to bring eventual downfall to the ambitious empire builders now in control of Japanese affairs. The British have sensed this for some time. It is largely responsible for their more or less passive attitude toward the penetration of the Canton area. To use the words of Prime Minister Chamberlain: "You can't build an empire without capital."

The words of Naoki Hoshino, director of the general affairs board of the government of Manchoukuo, point in the same direction. After first declaring to his people that Japan "patiently refrained as much as possible from sending troops to China to punish the provocative Chinese forces," he pleaded with great emotion for the necessary sacrifices on the part of Manchoukuans to enable the "motherland" to win the war forced upon her.

"In order to pay for the billions of yen needed for the war," he explained, "commodities of equal amount must be obtained and put to use. There are only two ways of obtaining such commodities: They must be either produced or purchased abroad. Japan is a poor country. So 'we' must produce and manage within the limits of such goods. It is only by great thrift and economy on the part of the people that the difficulties besetting the country (the Japanese empire) can be surmounted.

"To produce such supplies three things are necessary. First, labor; second, natural resources; third, capital. We have the first two. In the past it has been the practice (of Manchoukuo) to look to Japan for capital. Today, however, we can hardly behave like spoiled children receiving a regular allowance from 'father,' when Japan is making such sacrifices in the current 'incident.' Manchoukuo, having become of age, should, by its own strength, supply Japan."

If Chamberlain and Hoshino are right, the Japanese are in a sorry financial plight. And they must be disappointed. For 50 years they have had a "yen" for empire. Now they haven't the yen to pay for it. But what a bluff they are putting up!

BREAKING THE STOCKYARD STRIKE?

Nothing could indicate more forcefully the cleavage existing between the two great factions of American labor—the AFL and the CIO—than some of the circumstances surrounding the walk-out of workers in the Chicago stockyards. The strike was called on November 21 by the CIO packing house workers organization. Pickets were assigned to patrol all entrances to the yards.

Within a few days, however, the necessary steps had been taken to mediate the strike. But in the meantime a committee of some 35 AFL representatives were delegated by that organization to confer with the management—carrying with them an outright offer to operate the yards. They were reported to have slipped through the gates, in groups of two or three, so as not to arouse the suspicions or attract the attention of the CIO pickets. After a short conference with the manager they emerged and a spokesman for the group announced: "We will have 400 men on the job Monday morning."

One of the demands made by the AFL group upon the management, however, was that all protective police should be withdrawn so as not to create the impression they were strikebreakers.

There is no intention to here indicate or attempt to point out which faction in the dispute has the equities on its side or what should have been done, if anything, to smooth over the difficulties in the Chicago stockyards. That is beside the point. Suffice it to say that the breach between the two factions apparently has widened to proportions dangerous to the general welfare of the nation, when the only action considered necessary to remove one faction from the role of an actual strikebreaker is a demand for the "removal of protective police."

One of the greatest potential hindrances to a sound, steady industrial recovery in the United States at the present time is the total absence of indication that these factional differences will be effectively smoothed over at any time in the near future. If the leaders are desirous of serving the men they are presumed to represent, as well as doing their country a good turn in a time of great stress, they will stop calling each other unprintable names, as well as cease resorting to practices which they unqualifiedly condemn in others.

"Little Liechtenstein, wedged between Switzerland and Nazi Austria, decides not to re-arm." With the Venus De Milo, that makes two.

THE "FRILLS" COME HIGH

(From the Detroit Free Press.)

An official inquiry into the character and cost of education in New York state reveals some interesting and instructive facts.

The New York elementary schools, as recently as 1850, taught only eight subjects. Today they teach 18.

And the secondary or high schools, which taught 28 subjects in 1850, teach 63 subjects today. The steady increase in the number of subjects taught in the public schools of New York and many other states raises two important questions. Are the pupils benefited by increasing the number of subjects they are expected to learn to the point where they cannot get more than a smattering of any of them?

And is not the cost of many of these educational "frills" out of all proportion to their value to the pupil or to the community which pays for the upkeep of the schools?

The inquiry in New York showed, for example, that in 72 schools surveyed it costs a maximum of $347 a year to teach a junior or senior dramatic and public speaking, and $134 a year to teach him or her music.

The maximum cost of teaching the same boy or girl mathematics, history and other academic subjects is $36 a year.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

SCHEME TO GET TRY OUT WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Arrangements are shaping up for Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace's so-called "two-price system," which is really a scheme for huge distributions of surplus commodities to the needy poor. The scheme is a visionary—it calls for supplying the dietary deficiencies of the needy by selling them farm products at special low prices. But a practical try out is already in sight.

The fact is, New York's Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia has become a convert. Some time ago, he established a chain of milk depots, where the poor may show certificates of need and purchase milk below the market price. Recently, Wallace called in the bouncing little mayor, told him about the "two-price system," and urged him to use his depots for the sale of other commodities besides milk. After some hesitation, LaGuardia gave in, and, unless there is a hitch, vegetables, fruits and meat will be available in New York at poor people's prices. The high quality of LaGuardia's administration makes New York the ideal city for experiment.

Other mayors are also being urged to establish distribution systems, and everything is being done to conciliate the naturally fearful small merchants. Meanwhile, the Agriculture Department is having difficulties for an unexpected reason—too much enthusiasm at the treasury. Surgeon General Thomas Parran and Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., who was interested in the scheme by his socially conscious wife, are ardent converts. Some of the Surgeon General Parran's public health service people want to make supplementing the diet of the underprivileged the first objective. They would not stop at mere distribution of surplus commodities. And the Agriculture Department, fearing its scheme will be thrown out of kilter, does not wish to go so far.

GREAT POSSIBILITIES The significance of the "two-price system," if it survives the first tests, can hardly be exaggerated. As a public health measure, it is vastly important, especially in such cities as New York, where it will be easiest to manage and where tens of thousands of slum-dwellers now have below minimum diets. As an economic phenomenon, its effects may be far-reaching.

Of course, Secretary Wallace's chief temporary headaches—the immense surpluses in wheat and cotton—will not be greatly diminished by the new scheme. There is hope that giving cheap cotton mattresses and cheap flour to the poor will dispose of comparatively small amounts of wheat and cotton. Rigid production control in the next years must remove the remainders of these surpluses in export crops, for which there is no real demand in this country.

But, in the long run, the Agriculture Department envisions its new scheme affecting wheat and cotton. Greater demand for the vegetables, fruit and dairy products needed for health will be created by the two-price system. As the demand grows, it will be possible to shift wheat and cotton land into production of foods for which demand exists. And thus it is hoped to effect a slow reorganization of the nation's agriculture. The hope may be Utopian, but the scheme is interesting.

DEPARTMENTAL OPTIMISM However Utopian they may be, the schemes of the Agriculture Department look considerably more attractive after you have inspected the alternatives. There is little effective support for a return to the pre-AAA status. The farmers still want government donatives. But now the donatives are demanded in the form of such rural snake oils as the domestic allotment scheme and general price-fixing.

Curiously enough, the recent disaster at the polls has not worried the Agriculture Department overmuch. The department expects the present farm law to be left intact, with larger benefit payments, the two-price system, and perhaps processing taxes merely added as trimming. It is the theory that the farm organizations and the farm senators and congressmen will all quarrel so violently among themselves that they will end by accepting the department's program with gratitude.

There's no doubt that there will be an almighty row in congress. It is to be hoped, at least, that the department is right in forecasting that none of the snake oils will finally be prescribed by law. But there are reasons to believe that the forecast is a trifle optimistic.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

Someday, we'll reach the goal
Of that age-long search
For Truth.

Somewhere between the poles
Of doubt, and the faith
Of Youth!

The Confidence
Of Youth.

Every afternoon, between 3 and 4 o'clock, Atlanta is filled with the bright presence of youth. On the streets, in the downtown pavements, in the stores, youngsters of both sexes, homeward bound from high school, meet and mingle in eager contacts.

They are confident people, these youngsters. Confident in their own abilities and in the vital contacts with the world. They are marching forward in the great progress of mankind. You can see that confidence in their faces, though perhaps they do not realize it themselves, or could put the feeling, even haltingly, into words. But it is that confidence of each succeeding generation that spells the hope of the race. Without it man would, long ago, have perished from the earth, died of his own pessimism, committed harikiri in disgust at his ineptitudes.

Pouring Forth
Of Precious Wine.

It is very precious, this wine of youthful enthusiasms, poured forth every year into the muddled and perplexing streams of life. It seems, in many instances, tragic that the sweetness of youthful faith should so soon turn sour at contact with a realistic world. Yet, without that leaven of youth, the world would be impossible. So, perhaps, the sacrifice is not too great.

The story of the Minotaur, from Greek mythology, is not such a fable after all. You remember the Minotaur? A creature, half man and half bull, that lived in the center of a labyrinth and annually devoured seven youths and seven maidens, sent as sacrifices to the ancient city of Athens, until Theseus slew the monster and ended the need for tribute.

Just picture life itself as the Minotaur, demanding tribute of the finest of the world's youth, every year, and you will see an analogy that is not so far from correct.

Unfortunately, the new Theseus hasn't yet appeared on the world scene.

The Search
For Truth.

Wasn't Pontius Pilate who asked, "What is Truth?" And the world has not yet found a final answer to that question.

Someday, of course, the answer will be found. And when it is it will be compounded of the search for truth, the quest for wisdom, the questioning skepticism that is the heritage of youth, and the wiser, questioning skepticism that is the acquisition of age.

When Truth, abstract Truth, is found, it will become the lodestone of a universe, the spark that shall justify all experiences of mankind and that shall make all things work together for good.

That it is not yet found, is self-evident. For, if it was known to man, there would be no more cruelty, no more oppression, no more want, no more injustice.

It may lurk, somewhere, hidden in the dogmas of religion or it may be at the end of the pathway followed by the philosophers. Perhaps innocence will, someday, stumble across the precious thing in some secret place.

Wherever it is, it is the one great thing that all the thinkers, all the idealists and all the worshippers of all the ages have sought. It is the goal of science and the objective of faith. It is the one great need, the one factor that shall lift mankind higher than the angels.

What is Truth? I think, someday, when it is found, it will be found by youth. Bright-eyed, confident, eager, enthusiastic youth will answer the riddle of the ages.

And then the skepticism of age will become only the testing ground to prove the verity of youth's discovery.

That is why it is good to mingle, on the streets and in the stores, with youth, on an Atlanta afternoon, homeward bound from school. For, when you do, you are growing closer to contact with truth and you are mixing with a finer generation than any that have gone before. A finer generation, because in its freedom of thought, and independence of spirit, it is the herald of the discovery of the Golden Fleece of Truth than any previous generation has ever been.

Twenty-five Years Ago Today.

From The Constitution of Sunday, November 30, 1913:

"Police and city detectives searched the city last night in a vain effort to find a clew which would lead to the arrest of a handsome blond woman of about 30 years of age, following the reported loss of $110 in currency and $908 in checks by a well-known Deatur citizen."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From The Constitution of Friday, November 30, 1888:

"The New York professor claims that beauty is manufactured in the kitchen. A good cook and plenty of good food will make almost anybody handsome. The constant chewing of hard food strengthens the jaws and the muscles of the face. When people eat very little they should exercise their jaws by chewing gum for half an hour after each meal."

Lives in Pup-Tent.

Norman Ratcliff is living in a three-by-six-foot pup-tent while he works his way through the University of Alabama selling candy, ice cream and cigarettes.

Ratcliff came to the university from Lanett, Ala., with 25 cents in his pocket. He expected to get an NYA job to make expenses. All the NYA jobs were taken, but he pitched his tent on the campus and stayed anyway.

Two months after the opening of school he had bought all of his books and had $1 in his pocket. All of his expenses were paid with money he earned on a basket-peddling route through the university's fraternity row.

Ratcliff says he lives chiefly on raw vegetables and fruits and uses four quilts to keep warm at night in his tent. Asked if he thought he would get through the winter, he replied:

"Yes, I think so, if the snakes don't get me. I killed a moccasin about 10 feet from my tent the other night."

On the Record

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

It is my belief that Mr. Wendell Willkie, in attempting to protect his own interest, and those of his corporation, in the most open way, is making a genuine contribution to the democratic process. For Mr. Willkie is concentrating attention where it certainly ought to be directed by public opinion: upon the administrative agencies, which more and more are the actual government of the United States.

Mr. Willkie's method of procedure is uncommon, in these days, the fact in itself being an indication of what is happening to our democracy. Big business has "learned its lesson" to such an extent that by and large it prefers to go around to the back door, and by contacts with inside people come to terms with the government, by "playing the game," while often, with its other hand, it fights the government under cover.

Mr. Willkie, however, believing that he has a just and reasonable case, has had the temerity to take the issue of TVA and private power to the public, on the platform, in the press, and in person. For that reason he has been singled out for isolation and retaliation by the champions of public power.

The question which Mr. Willkie has raised is a very important question indeed. He has demanded to know under what rules the TVA is operating in respect to private power industries operating in the Tennessee valley.

WILLKIE'S
CHARGES

He has attempted to demonstrate that the present policy of government competition subsidized two ways—first in the TVA itself, and then by outright grants of federal money to municipalities—means bankruptcy for the private companies, with consequent losses to the many thousands of investors, who are also citizens of the United States.

He has proposed to the TVA that it make a board composed of representatives of the private interests in the Tennessee valley, they be bought out, intact, so as not to destroy an existing and functioning complex.

He has asked, however, that the price be set, not by the TVA, but by the Federal Reserve Board, a disinterested board. He has suggested a board composed of a representative of his own corporation, of the TVA and of the supreme court. He has proposed that the price be set by the SEC. He has proposed a board composed of Professor Felix Frankfurter, President Clarence Dwyer, of the University of Wisconsin—the LaFollette choice to succeed Glenn Frank—and Karl Compton, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, a leading expert in the field of civil engineering.

Nobody could call any of these boards rigged in favor of "economic royalists."

But the TVA has turned a deaf ear to all these proposals and pursues its own course of duplication, which is nothing more or less than slow confiscation.

NOTHING TO DO WITH THE CASE

The answer to Mr. Willkie's charges and arguments has always been that the TVA is "the spokesman for the utility interests" and a reference to past abuses on the part of utility companies.

Although I know of a number of utility representatives who criticize Mr. Willkie very severely for "getting into the act," the TVA, in its administration, the answer, were it one hundred per cent true, has nothing whatever to do with the case—unless one is to assume that private industry no longer has a right to have a spokesman or to be heard in this country unless it "behaves." And its "behavior" is coming to be judged, not by the way it treats its labor or its stockholders, but by just how docile it is to the increasing ruling class of the agency bureaucrats.

This tendency is just as dangerous as it is far-reaching. It is far enough, and you have a duplication of the Nazi system of economics, where private industry exists by grace of the partisans in charge of agencies, whose powers are governed by no rules or procedures, but are completely arbitrary, and are used to reward the "virtuous"—i. e., the Nazis—and punish the "wicked"—i. e., the non-Nazis.

OTHERWISE
A RACKET

The right to fair and collective bargaining vis-a-vis the government belongs to the representatives of capital, as well as to other citizens, unless we have abolished private enterprise in principle and in fact. Otherwise government becomes a racket.

Issues like the one between Mr. Willkie and the TVA can only be arbitrated inside the democratic process. Mr. Willkie wants arbitration, that is to say, peace. The TVA wants dictation, capitulation at the point of a pistol, that is to say, a peace of Munich. Dr. Arthur Morgan's essential quarrel with the TVA was on precisely this matter of decent democratic procedure.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

THE ROSE BOWL Out home in a book I have a picture of the first team to play in Pasadena's Tournament of Roses football game. It was the Michigan team of 1901, with Fielding H. Yost the coach, and the late Dan McGugin was one of the guards.

This was the famous "Point-a-Minute" team which wasn't scored on all year and which scored more than 500 points in a well-rounded schedule.

No one is quite sure who first thought of football as a real estate promotion. But that was what it was in the beginning. They wanted to let the world know they could have roses and football on January 1, while most of the nation had snow and chapped lips.

The Michigan team of 1901 almost caused them to change their plans. They did give up football for a while. One year they had Roman chariot races. The next year they had gladiators. Eventually they came back to football.

They didn't like football so much after that game with Michigan. Michigan won by more than 40 points and the second half never was completed. Stanford ran out of players and even after the substitute rule was waived, Stanford still ran out of players.

Michigan hadn't been able to practice for a week because of snow. It was so hot in California they almost collided during the game. Michigan took along 15 men, a coach and manager. One of the subs got into the game. Today no team thinks of taking less than 25.

After Stanford's drubbing came the gladiators and the chariot races but football came back to stay. The game now is housed in a big concrete bowl. The WPA at last got some roses growing on and about it. For many years they merely stuck fresh roses here and yon on the bowl. It has become the most sought-after prize in football.

IMPORTANT MONEY There is the usual ephemeral fame and glory to be found in the Rose Bowl. But what interests graduate managers, coaches and faculty chairmen is the money.

The Rose Bowl pays off big dividends. Each team receives a take of about $90,000 from the game, which gives you an idea. Ninety thousand dollars is important money. It will relieve a lot of stadium notes and cause the bank presidents to take that cold look off their faces.

The trip is expensive. It costs important money to put a squad of 25 players, three or four coaches, a manager, faculty men and others on the train. It costs serious money to bed them down, feed them and when they arrive the hotel bills run into fat figures. The net profit, however, remains large. And so, the Rose Bowl game remains popular with one and all.

Now and then college presidents and athletic associations pass laws forbidding teams to play post-season games. If the Rose Bowl bid comes along no one pays any attention to the rule or it is "waived."

The Sugar Bowl game at New Orleans remains the next big show with several lesser "bowl" games drawing well. The Sugar Bowl and the Rose Bowl are big spectacles and add their color to the sports tapestry of the nation.

The real estate man who thought of the plan back in 1901 had an idea which has grown well beyond the original plans. All the real estate has long since been sold and resold. Pasadena is one of the most beautiful cities in the world and the Rose Bowl is an institution.

THE TOURNAMENT OF ROSES

The Tournament of Roses is a free show and annually it draws a crowd of at least one million people. They start coming the night before. When they get to Pasadena's street cleaners get to work cleaning up old crumpled newspapers, bits of hot dogs, sandwiches and all the debris of cigar butts and papers which a crowd of a million people can leave.

The tournament is a parade which requires about two hours to pass a given point. It is fantastically beautiful. Tremendous floats are made entirely of flowers. They are made into great birds, buildings, bridges and castles. It is nothing at all to see a small mountain with a real waterfall down its sides.

I recall one parade in which some cuties in bathing suits were throwing real snowballs at the crowd. The snow had been brought down from a nearby mountain peak. Most of the cuties wore bathing suits. Now and then it is briskly cold and their legs look blue and goose bumpy but they don't seem to mind.

The football teams never see this. About the time the parade is on they are getting ankles taped and receiving last-minute instructions.

The Most Unlovely May Need Help, But Only the Lovable Give It

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

"And thy neighbor as thyself," the lawyer quoted glibly. He had answered correctly, and Jesus told him so. But he was not satisfied.

"And who is my neighbor?" he demanded.

It was a typical lawyer question; but it merits the gratitude of mankind, for Jesus answered with the parable that begins: "A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell among thieves, which stripped him of his raiment, and wounded him, and departed, leaving him half dead."

The question was justified, for it is evident that we cannot love our neighbor unless we know who he is. The parable answers the question clearly, yet for many years I failed to understand it, for I made the usual mistake of reading between the lines instead of reading the words.

I saw only the wounded man bleeding in the dust of the highway, and he seemed to be the neighbor who was shamefully neglected by two men and loved by only one.

But that is not the story as Jesus told it.

The only persons who were given opportunity to qualify as neighbors were the three travelers who saw the injured man lying there.

VOTERS APPROVE OF CIVIL SERVICE FOR RELIEF AIDES

Gallup Poll Reveals 75
Per Cent Approve Suggestion of Hopkins for Minimizing Politics.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Harry Hopkins' suggestion a few days ago that all relief officials be placed under civil service is a scheme which would meet with the overwhelming approval of American voters.

The WPA director, declaring that "the American people recent the injection of petty politics into unemployment relief work," said he would like to see his whole organization go under civil service "lock, stock and barrel."

The sentiments of the voting population are reflected in a nationwide survey just completed by the American Institute of Public Opinion which asked: "Do you think officials in charge of relief should be under civil service?"

The vote was:

Yes	75%
No	25%

The vote is significant because it shows that any move toward putting relief under civil service would be a tremendously popular move for the New Deal to make. It would go far toward removing the stigma of politics which, according to previous Institute surveys, color the public's attitude toward relief.

"Graft" a Factor.

A wide array of reasons is presented by voters for their opinions in today's survey. The most frequent idea expressed is that putting relief under civil service would "cut down graft and corruption." A second large group thinks that more capable and efficient administrators would be picked if WPA was under civil service.

Others declare that "relief is simply another government department and all government jobs should be under civil service."

Voters who, on the other hand, opposed putting the WPA under civil service have equally definite reasons. A large number agree with the sentiment of one voter who declared: "Relief may not have to be permanent, but putting it under civil service would make it permanent. People who qualified under civil service would demand that their jobs continue."

A substantial number of voters also raised the objection that putting relief under civil service would accomplish little because "it would be just as subject to corruption that way as any other way."

Another group expressed the view that relief should be handled by county and town officials.

Still Coughing?

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your common cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you may get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious Coughs may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with any remedy less potent than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed mucous membranes and to loosen and expel germy mucus.

Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, try Creomulsion. Your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not thoroughly satisfied with the benefits obtained. Creomulsion is one word, ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want. (Adv.)

2 Byrd Brothers Help at Marriage

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP)—As usual, there were two best men today when one of the Byrd brothers of Virginia—Tom, Dick and Harry—was married.

When Thomas Byrd went to the altar, with Mrs. Elizabeth Miller Mitchell, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, U. S. N., retired, carried the ring; he handed it to United States Senator Harry F. Byrd; and the senator gave it to the bridegroom at the altar. At previous weddings in the Byrd family, the bridegroom always has been attended by both his brothers.

Instead of by the federal government.

Workers Favor Move.

One interesting sidelight of the survey is that WPA workers themselves favor placing relief under civil service. Their vote is 76 per cent "yes," 24 per cent "no."

Furthermore, voters of both the major political parties endorse the idea.

OFFICIALS URGED DAVIS CLEMENCY

Rivers' Secretary Explains
Circumstances Surrounding Order.

An attack by Judge Claude Porter, of Rome, on an order granting clemency to W. C. Davis, slayer of his sister-in-law, yesterday drew a rejoinder from Downing Musgrove, executive secretary to Governor Rivers.

Musgrove asserted that clemency had been recommended by a large number of officials and citizens of Floyd county, including the solicitor general who prosecuted the case and the chief of police who helped prepare the evidence.

Musgrove quoted a letter of the solicitor general in which the prosecutor said that Davis would not have been convicted if the case went to the jury and that on behalf of the state he agreed to clemency after the prisoner had served a short time.

The statement of the Governor's secretary follows: "I have just noticed in the press that the Prison and Parole Commission has been attacked because of executive clemency being extended to one W. C. Davis, convicted in Floyd superior court."

This clemency was granted by the executive department, and without recommendation from the Prison and Parole Commission one way or the other; and upon the recommendation of a responsible number of citizens of Floyd county, including the tax collector, a representative in the general assembly from Floyd county, by the secretary of the city commission of Rome, by the solicitor of the city of Rome, by the warden under whom he was serving, by the tax receiver of Floyd county, by the chairman of the city commission of Rome, by the chief of police of the city of Rome, and by the solicitor of the superior court, who states in his letter that he was thoroughly convinced that all the facts had come out in the trial of the case, the defendant would not have been convicted, and that from what he knew could have been introduced in evidence, if the jury could have gotten hold of the real facts, they would not have convicted Davis of any crime, and upon the conclusion for the state that counsel for the defendant withdrew his plea of not guilty and plead guilty, with the understanding that after a short duration of time in the penitentiary that he, the solicitor general, would recommend that the defendant be paroled or pardoned.

These recommendations were accompanied by others that appear of file in this office, and are a matter of public record.

GOOD MORNING

By LOUIE D. NEWTON, GAMBLING.

The story in Monday's papers from the American Institute of Public Opinion on the recent survey of the forms of gambling in this country was most interesting to church people in the fact that the survey placed churches in the lead as gambling centers with 29 per cent, punch board 26 per cent, slot machines 23 per cent, playing cards for money 21 per cent, betting on elections 19 per cent, sweepstake tickets 13 per cent, betting on horse races 10 per cent, and number games 9 per cent.

Three gambling in the churches was listed as lotteries and raffles.

I do not question the accuracy of Dr. Gallup's figures, since his forecasts of recent elections would clearly indicate that he knows how to find out what is going on in this country, but I do question the application of his percentage of gambling in the churches of this part of the country. I have written him to ask if the survey shows varying percentages of lotteries and raffles in the churches of the south as compared with other sections. I am bound to believe that his reply will indicate a minimum of such practice in the churches of the south.

Whatever the final facts may reveal, it is not a sobering reflection for church people that any church anywhere any time should resort to any form of gambling to raise money? We have just had a Sunday school lesson on stealing and next Sunday we have one on lying, and now this announcement that 29 per cent of the gambling confessed by people interviewed in this survey was in church lotteries and raffles!

How much effect will the pronouncements on gambling from the church people have with this sort of thing going on in the churches? It is a sad day for the churches when they are willing to harbor forms of gambling by which they are teaching the young people to violate the law of God and the law of man. It may result in taking in a few dollars for the present, but its ultimate effect will be most costly to the churches and to society.

I was very grateful to find in the meeting of the Atlanta Baptist ministers on Monday morning that not one pastor present knew of a single instance of such gambling in his or any other Baptist church. I have heard of such practices now and then, but not in recent years. I am told by ministers in other denominations in Atlanta that they know of no such practices in their groups.

THIS MORNING

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES II.

"A fortified residence 'gainst the tooth of time
And razure of oblivion."

Having just sat up most of the night reading a book, we feel that we should mention it even though this is not a book review column and does not mean to be. The book is "Flight into Oblivion," by Professor A. J. Hanna, of Rollins College. The "flight" is that of Jefferson Davis and his Confederate cabinet after the evacuation of Richmond, and the "oblivion" is something which the book itself will do an admirable much to destroy. For here is a record of wanderings as classic as the "Aeneid," as exciting as a detective story, and as true as the War Between the States whose neglected last incident it was. All the elements of great drama are present, and Professor Hanna has used them well.

The most interesting passages, for us, are ones in which are described Jefferson Davis' hope of escaping across the Mississippi and carrying on the war from the vast Confederate area commanded by General Kirby Smith. "Kirby-Smithdom" they called it, according to Mr. Hanna. It included Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Missouri, and it was so remote from the rest of the Confederacy and so comparatively undaunted and unharmed at the time of Lee's surrender that Davis believed the struggle might be continued there long enough at least to secure better terms for the Confederacy in surrender. Remote from his fellow Confederates, Kirby Smith was a virtual dictator, commanding the economic and civil life of the land as well as its military operations, and obtaining real gold at the Mexican border for southern cotton. Something of an emperor there in his own right because of war's circumstance, Kirby Smith looked to a real emperor for possible aid in war and refuge in defeat—Maximilian of Mexico.

The northern press was saying that Davis and the cabinet had "escaped" with the enormous sum of $13,000,000 in gold and silver belonging to the Confederate treasury. There was no such amount, but there was $500,000, and it plays a thrilling part in Mr. Hanna's story.

The "flight" was not recognized as that when it began. It was simply a transfer of the Confederate capital to Danville. When it was necessary a few days later to move on to Greensboro, that, too, was simply a moving of the seat of government. But when Johnston surrendered in spite of an order from Davis to carry on and when members of the cabinet began resigning or dropping out and Stoneman's Federal cavalry began closing in, only Davis himself maintained the fiction of a government in transfer. The others knew themselves to be men in flight. Of all the cabinet, only Judah Benjamin had his imagination caught by the President's plan to take what was left of the Confederacy's government and fighting men to "Kirby-Smithdom" across the Mississippi.

What would have happened if Davis had reached Texas and managed to carry on the war long enough, perhaps with Maximilian's aid, to make peace which would not have included the tragic era of destruction in the name of reconstruction? Where would the south be today, if it had been permitted to reconstruct itself, if there had been no carpet-baggers, no need of a first Ku Klux Klan, no saturnalia of waste and oppression and hate?

Reading this book, one wonders that it has never been written before, that the wealth of fiction are only now employed to this absorbing effect.

MOON ON THE WATER

Pamela Invites Gavin to Dinner, Jane Doesn't Mention Knowing Him

By RUBY M. AYRES.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE. When Jane, youngest of the Brookers' three daughters, is 16, the family can scarcely believe the good news that her godmother, who has been with her 1000 pounds to be held in trust until she is 21. Jane, who has little with her, is an odd mixture of dreaminess and philosophy and her mother has long given up hope of "managing" her. Pamela, a year older, is saving and careful. The eldest and the beauty of the family, would spend the money lavishly. But that would be expected of her. When Mrs. Brooker dies suddenly, Dulcie and Jane find their world upside down. But Pamela just naturally takes her mother's place. Shortly before Jane is to get her legacy, Gavin Montford, who has been in the Canadian wilds, returns to England and is visiting his uncle, Dr. Bingham, the Brookers' neighbor and family physician. The Brookers' old second-hand car stops suddenly when Jane is driving alone. Gavin, out for a walk, comes along and tells her the only trouble is her gas tank is empty. He walks with her two miles to a garage to get gasoline. Learning en route that she loves poetry and is superstitious, particularly about seeing the moon through glass or reflected in the water, NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

posed to scare away evil spirits." "There ought not to be evil spirits on such a night," she said. They were back on the main road now, where the headlights of the car split the darkness. "Nobody has run away with it, you see," Montford remarked. "Poor old car! It's not worth running away with," she sighed. They filled the tank and stowed the empty cans away under the seat before Montford said, "And this is where we say good-night—" "Let me drive you back!" Jane said impulsively. "It's a shame you should have that long walk again."

"Of course we do—Dulcie knows dozens—" "Dulcie is a beauty," Pamela said complacently. "And I've got three thousand pounds," Jane reminded her, and then, with sudden energy: "Why shouldn't I get married?" "I can't imagine you as any one's wife. You're such a frightful muddler," Pamela said, with sisterly candor. "Perhaps some men like muddlers," Jane retorted. "They don't choose them for wives," Pamela said wisely. Jane groped for a cigarette. "I should like to marry a pioneer," she said, after a moment. "I should like to live abroad—Canada or Australia, or somewhere like that, where we could ride horseback—" "And be boiled alive in summer and frozen to death in the winter," Pamela said. "I shouldn't have to dress up, anyway," Jane retorted. "I can't think why Dulcie finds it such fun to keep on changing her frock and having her hair waved. Waste of money."

"You'd look a great deal better if you had your hair waved." "Me!" Jane laughed, and passed a hand across her unruly mop. "I'd be sorry for any one who tried to wave my hair. Have a cigarette?" "No, thank you." There was a little silence before Pamela said, "Father has asked a man to dinner tomorrow night—Dr. Bingham's nephew. He comes from Canada, and Dr. Bingham seems to think he's finding it rather dull, and sort of suggested we should be polite to him. It's a pity Dulcie isn't home."

"Well—men always like her better than they like us." The silence fell again till Jane asked, with elaborate indifference, "Is he coming?" "I suppose so—I've asked Sidney, too. It will look better to have another man. I hope he's not frightfully dull and ordinary."

Jane checked a smile, wondering why it seemed impossible to say, as she would have done in the ordinary way, "He isn't—I know him."

"You'd better make yourself look decent for once," Pamela went on. "I suppose you have got some sort of evening frock?" "Not a very nice one," Jane said regretfully. She pushed back her chair and walked over to the mirror. "Do you think I'm awful fright?" she asked soberly. Pamela hesitated. "No, I can't truthfully say you're a fright," she admitted. "You're different from us, of course—but I'm not sure if it would be a real improvement if you suddenly did your hair as we do, or dressed differently—there's something about you—I suppose it's your personality. I've heard people say so, anyway."

Jane's eyes shone. "What people?" she asked. "Oh, just people—Mrs. Bingham for one."

"Oh, Mrs. Bingham!" Jane said disappointedly. "She's not such a bad judge," Pamela said kindly. "She said you had amazing vitality, and were full of surprises. She considered her sister critically. 'Your eyes are your best feature. I suppose, and you've got an attractive smile, but, of course, you're too independent—men like the 'leaning' kind who want looking after; that's where Dulcie is so clever.'"

Jane pushed her plate aside and leaned her elbows on the table. "I shall be 21 in three months' time," she said. "I know. What about it? What will you do?" "I haven't really made up my mind yet—perhaps I shall travel."

"Can't I? I do most things alone."

"It wouldn't be any fun—alone, surely?" "Perhaps I shall come across a kindred spirit," Jane said flippantly. "Some one who will help you to spend your money," her sister retorted. "Three thousand pounds won't last forever—you ought to keep it invested and live on the interest."

"How dull!" "It would be worse to have nothing at all—and somehow I don't believe you will ever get married."

"Why not?" Jane asked sharply. "Oh, I don't know—you don't seem to care about men."

"We don't know any—"

ROOSEVELT DUBS COTTON WARNING 'SAME OLD STORY'

President Chides New Orleans Exchange for Not Proposing Solution While Pointing to Peril.

WARM SPRINGS, Nov. 29.—(AP) President Roosevelt today classed the board of directors of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange with chambers of commerce and the National Manufacturers' Association because, he said, it called the farm problem a critical one but proposed no solution.

Before discussing the working of the crop control law with Chairman Marvin Jones, Democrat, Texas, of the house agriculture committee, the chief executive told a press conference on the way to the swimming pool he had only read hurriedly the newspaper accounts of the exchange's annual report.

Same Old Story.
He asked reporters if the exchange had a plan to suggest and when informed it had set forth certain "basic principles" for proposing a solution, commented it was the same old story.

There you are, he said. They set forth objectives and no plan to carry them out. This was typical, he added, of resolutions frequently adopted by the National Manufacturers' Association and other trade groups.

He said the first duty was to find a plan, then a method of financing. He did not say whether increased cash benefits to farmers would be sought in the new congress, or whether processing taxes would be asked to raise money for such benefits.

One of the five "basic principles" outlined by the New Orleans Exchange board was that as long as the farmer buys in a protected market and sells in a free one he "must be compensated in some manner to meet world conditions, if he is to receive a fair return for his labor."

Must Continue Control.
The board also declared, and the President said he had noted it, that crop control "must be continued until our present surplus is reduced to normal proportions." The board also reported that farm loans, while perhaps necessary as emergency measures, "produce no cures."

Exhibit of Mexican Scenes Opens For 2 Weeks Showing at Museum

23 Pictures of Newton Merrill Highly Praised in Earlier Showings; New Claude Herndon Work Will Be Included in Display.

By ST. JOHN BARNWELL.
A brilliant array of Mexican scenes and flower paintings will open tomorrow at the High Museum of Art for a two-week showing. The 23 pictures are the work of Newton Merrill, of Fern Park, Fla., whose knowledge of interior decorations has added to his pictures a decorative livable quality that complements architectural plans.

A native of New York state, Merrill studied interior decoration and painting for 15 years while traveling in Europe. Settling in Menton on the Riviera, Merrill arranged his studio with valuable provincial furniture in a 17th century olive mill remodeled into a home. At that time he lectured on furniture before the Anglo-American Lecture Society of Monte Carlo.

Returning to America, Merrill has devoted his ability to painting. Every winter is spent in his Fern Park home and each summer in travel for inspiring scenery. He was first attracted to Atlanta because of the dogwood blossoms' fame, whose beauty he came to

Old Yorkshire Town Is Deserted As Police Hunt Shoeless 'Slasher'

HALIFAX, England, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Swinging volunteer patrolmen tonight hustled frightened women through the gloomy by-ways of this old Yorkshire town, where Scotland Yard detectives hunted a "vaccinator" blamed for repeated night slayings.

Chief Inspector Salisbury called in police reinforcements from neighboring districts to halt the curious terror caused by a smooth-faced, pop-eyed youth who wears no shoes and carries a safety razor to gash the arms of girls. An attack in a town 50 miles away last night and the frequency of slayings in Halifax itself led police to believe the "vaccinator" had an accomplice or an imitator. The attack, at Platt Bridge, Lancashire, was the 14th, the others being at Halifax.

The swift flight of the slasher after each attack has been made easy by dozens of ancient "gin-nels" or passages which wind between Halifax's musty buildings and afford a perfect means of escape.

Tonight social events were postponed, moving picture theaters were almost empty, and suburban streets were deserted save for patrolling volunteers. Shops sold out their stocks of stout walking sticks and whistles.

Mill girls marched to and from factories guarded by workmen carrying pieces of lead pipe, whips and crowbars.

Soldiers from the Duke of Wellington's barracks escorted women down the long, dark road past the garrison, near where one had been slashed.

A municipal election is scheduled for Thursday, but housewives have been so afraid to venture out that not a single listener showed up at one candidate's meeting.

CHARGE AGAINST D. R. COBB KILLED

Insurance Agent Pays Occupational Tax.

Charges of practicing without a license against Darwin R. Cobb, insurance agent, were withdrawn yesterday, and the accusation was placed on the dead docket of the Criminal Court of Fulton county. In a letter to Solicitor John S. McClelland, of the Fulton court, W. R. Mitchell, of the state insurance department, said Cobb has paid his occupational tax and is now qualified to do business anywhere in Georgia. Mitchell initiated the action against Cobb several days ago.

Cobb issued the following statement concerning the matter: I wish to state this whole matter was a misunderstanding. I have no quarrel with the state as far as I know. All this is fair to the fair minded. But I am just as careful to deal with them truthfully as I am my own. I want no person's business except on the basis of truth and a clear understanding—never have and never expect to.

This statement is made on the advice of many of my clients and friends to clear away any suspicions or questions that may linger in the minds of hundreds of my clients and prospective clients.

Atlanta - Augusta Route Cities Represented at Gathering.

MADISON, Ga., Nov. 29.—Good roads enthusiasts from 13 Georgia cities assembled here today to officially mark the completion of State Highway No. 12, shortest route linking Atlanta and Augusta.

Motorcades originating in Atlanta and Augusta rolled into Madison at mid-day, bringing scores of automobiles laden with representatives from cities and towns along the route. Each line of cars was met at the city limits by Ben S. Thompson and C. M. Furlow, reception committee chairman, and welcomed to the city.

Speakers at the ceremonies which followed in a downtown theater included Mayor R. M. Turnell, J. Frank Stovall, Morgan county commission chairman; Herbert Watson, of the state highway board; T. H. McGibony, of Greensboro, chairman of the Route 12 Association, who was master of ceremonies; and J. H. Purks, president of the Madison Kiwanis Club, which sponsored the motorcade celebration.

The motorcaders were guests at a barbecue prepared by W. C. Hemperley, of Madison.

The Atlanta-Augusta "short route" movement was begun about 12 years ago, and completed with the paving of the Union Point-Crawfordville link. From Atlanta it extends through Decatur, Lithonia, Conyers, Covington, Rutledge, Madison, Greensboro, Union Point, Crawfordville, Warrenton and Thomson into Augusta.

Included in the Atlanta delegation were Downing Musgrove, executive secretary to Governor Rivers; Major Phil Brewster, state public safety director; Captain Jack Malcom, head of the city traffic bureau; Mayor Pro Tem Robert Carpenter; C. TIFTON, Ga., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Roy Harris, speaker of the house of representatives, told an audience here today the state's social security, health and educational programs must be discontinued or means found to finance them.

He told a number of legislators present they would be unpopular after the next meeting of the general assembly if the programs are discontinued or if new taxes are levied.

POSTAL WORKERS SELECT ATLANTA

State Convention Will Be Held Here for Second Consecutive Time.

Atlanta's pull as a convention city was illustrated again when the United National Association of Post Office Clerks decided to hold its state convention here for the second consecutive time.

The association closed its 1938 meeting with a banquet last Saturday night. Principal speakers included Wylie West, Decatur postmaster; O. E. Myers, manager of Fifth Civil Service district; Dean Raimundo de Ovies, Frank Fraser, assistant Atlanta postmaster, and W. H. Trezevant, superintendent of mail of the local post office. Floyd R. Sanders, of Atlanta, national vice president of the group, was toastmaster.

The banquet climaxed two business sessions of vital interest to postal employees. Resolutions adopted called for extension of civil service to third class post offices; permanent relief for substitutes through a grade classification plan, support of the McCarran longevity bill, appointment of assistant postmasters in all second class post offices, and liberalization of the retirement law.

Tyrone Power And Annabella Off on an Island

RIO DE JANEIRO, Nov. 29. (UP)—Tyrone Power, Hollywood film star and Annabella, petite French actress, whose names have been linked romantically for several months, spent today on a privately-owned island in Guanabara Bay, according to the newspaper A Noite.

The paper said Power, who arrived here yesterday from Buenos Aires, took a launch this morning to the island, which is owned by Darke de Mattos, millionaire sportsman. Annabella already was there, A Noite added.

It was realized that when Power went to the suite reserved for him yesterday in the Copacabana Hotel, the streamlined French star reportedly left her rooms, two floors above Power's, and quit the hotel with two bags. She recently arrived by steamer from France where she divorced her husband.

Tennessee's Vols To Meet Oklahoma in Orange Bowl Clash

ON SAFARI IN THE SEDGE, Nov. 29.—As everyone knows a partridge in a pen is a very beautiful little bird and will almost stand still while one pats it on the head.

I know this from past experience, having made many visits to the state game farm in DeKalb county and become well acquainted with the numerous charges of Mr. Purser Collins.

I have even gone so far as to fondle a Chukar, the bigger species of game bird which has all the disarming tendencies of a baby in a cradle when limited to the confines of a cage.

Now, there is a very American expression, which was born with sporting people attending athletic contests. It is known as "getting the bird." But I assure you that this expression has nothing to do with hunting.

It is one thing to get the bird, an expression of rank disapproval, at an athletic contest, and getting the bird, or perhaps those two birds, in the bush.

My two partners, Major Trammell Scott and George Trautman, president of the American Association, seem to be doing all right by themselves.

There'll be birds for supper. But that still doesn't excuse either the fowling piece I am using or the foul aim that is causing all the trouble.

It almost has caused me to lose faith in the partridge. I had come to admire the Bob White family on visits to the game farm. But now I don't know.

It is the Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde of the fields. Huddled complacently in a pen, the quail makes you ashamed of any desire to hunt it with a gun.

In the field, the quail, which comes up with a roar and is gone before you realize it, is an infuriating, maddening animated mass of feathers.

You can fire dead into the covey and, by chance they're going into the sun, discover they're gone without the loss of even a feather.

I'll never understand this. It does not pay to fire into a covey. It has taken me only a matter of 10 years to learn this lesson. But I think I understand it now.

THEY QUICKEN THE PULSE.

Regardless of how long and often a hunter goes into the fields, the rise of a covey never fails to quicken the pulse. When the dogs freeze on point and someone walks slowly ahead to flush them, there is a general quickening of the senses.

There is an explosive quality about the rise of a covey. Or even a single. And it is not possible to be utterly calm about it. Perhaps that is why the less experienced hunters find it so easy to miss.

He'll throw up the gun and never think to take aim. He just pulls the trigger quickly and wonders why something doesn't fall, besides the empty shell.

I know that Major Scott has been going into the woods for 30-odd years. Or at least for 30 years, odd and even. And so I think I may be excused for resting the gun on a stump as I study his technique.

There is nothing hurried about the Major's actions as he goes in on a covey. Although I do notice there is a bit of flush to his cheeks. He probably will deny he is experiencing any emotion, and will lay it to the sharpness of the air.

I notice the Major very carefully picks out single birds out of a covey and takes his time bringing them down. George Trautman, the American Association president, follows somewhat the same technique. He is an old bird hunter, too.

Over to my left is Jasper Donaldson, secretary of the Atlanta baseball club. Donaldson seems to know his way around, too. It must be the country boy in him.

It is a pleasurable feeling to know that all aren't firing blanks. And yet it is a bit embarrassing for the Major to talk out—"I believe you winged that one. Call the dog."

It is restful and peaceful in the sedge field, but I think I just heard a familiar creak of the woods. I do not mean the kind that water runs through. It wasn't a bad hunch. As the big red oval which looks more like a ball of fire than a sun drops behind the trees, the two handsome perchmen appear pulling the camp wagon.

The big automobile cushions which serve as seats will have a customer shortly.

A SHORT, SHORT STORY.

I recall, sitting on the soft cushions of the wagon, the story of the neophyte hunter experiencing his first hunting in Georgia.

He was given a mule to ride. All that day he went through the business of dismounting whenever a covey was found. He grew a bit weary of this procedure.

And so late in the afternoon, he called a boy. "Is this mule broke to shot?" he asked.

"How's that, boss?"

"I say, is this mule broke to shot?"

"I don't know, boss. He's broke to a plow. And if you mean will he stand still while you shoot that gun off his back, I'd say just one time. And it sho' is a long walk back to the camp."

A GREAT TEACHER.

Experience is the great teacher. Major Scott said he used to set off through the woods and follow the dogs all day. He did it for years.

Now, he says, he finds an increasing fondness for the wagon. "I guess you can put it down to experience. At any rate, I find myself looking for the wagon."

"Walking is wonderful exercise but you can find the birds just as well with a couple of horses and good dogs doing the work."

BASEBALL AND BIRD DOGS.

Baseball and bird dogs seem to mix pretty well, in the case of Scott, the Southern League president, and Trautman, president of the American Association and also chairman of the National Association executive committee.

Trautman is an enthusiastic hunter. "You can't beat the simple life," he pointed out. I guess this does come under the heading of the simple life. A cabin in the pines, vast acreage of sedge and other cover with a plentiful supply of birds. A log fire at nightfall and a lot of interesting conversation far, far into the night.

There is only one point that might be changed to make it perfect. Five o'clock is an early rising hour, in any language.

SMITHIES SEEK W. PALM BEACH FOR GRID SLATE

Negotiations for Two-Year Football Contract Nearing Completion.

By ROY WHITE.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Nov. 29.—Negotiations for a two-year football contract between West Palm Beach High and Tech High, of Atlanta, were nearing completion here today.

Red Whittington, West Palm Beach coach, mailed the two-year home-and-home contract today to W. O. Cheney, principal of Tech High, confirming terms between the two teams some time ago.

Whittington proposes the first game to be played here on December 2, 1939, with the second game in Atlanta in 1940.

FIRST TIME.

It will be the first time that Tech High has ever played a high school eleven in Florida with the exception of Jacksonville and Miami.

Tech High had some pleasant relations with West Palm Beach's baseball team in June when the locals won a three-game series.

West Palm Beach went on to beat Charlotte High, and had two of its members selected for a trip to England during the summer. Mizell Platt Jr., outfielder, and Tommy O'Rourke, pitcher-outfielder, and the main spring in West Palm Beach's victorious series with Tech High, made the trip with the American all-stars.

TWO-YEAR PACT.

Whittington first proposed the two-year football agreement last June and again talked of the two games when he was in Atlanta last in August.

West Palm Beach's football team will close one of its most successful seasons Thursday night at Pahokee, Fla.

West Palm Beach battled the Andrew Jackson eleven to a scoreless tie in the first game at Jacksonville. Tech High plays the Andrew Jackson eleven December 9 at Jacksonville in a charity game.

Trustees Refuse Bob Zuppke's Resignation

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—(AP)—The resignation of Robert C. Zuppke, for 26 years head coach at the University of Illinois, was refused today by the board of trustees of the University, meeting here in secret session.

Oscar G. Meyer, president of the board of trustees, issued this statement:

"The board of trustees of the University of Illinois disapproves of any change in the status of Coach Zuppke."

Wendell S. Wilson, director of athletics at the University, disclosed that Zuppke, target for criticism over the showing of his teams of the last several years, had been requested by the athletic board to step down as active head coach. Wilson said that Zuppke had recently appeared before the board at its request and that he turned in his resignation.

This automatically brought the resignation before the board of trustees, which declined to accept it.

Previously by telephone, Zuppke from his home in Champaign, had refused to deny or admit the reports that he had resigned. He referred questions to the meeting of the board of trustees.

Informed by telephone that the board of trustees had refused to accept his resignation, Zuppke blurted: "That's good. I can be a real sport either way. Things will be worse next year and I wonder if members of the athletic board can take it. They'll have to take it next year. I can. I'll never go against Illinois."

ANOTHER SUCCESSFUL GRID SEASON CONCLUDED BY CADETS

G. M. A.'s grid squad, pictured above, has just completed another highly successful football season and Coaches Bud Harris and Captain J. R. Grayson are of the opinion the Cadets' record compares favorably with that of any other G. I. A. A. team. During the season, G. M. A. lost only two games, a 13-7 decision to Boys' High and a 9-7 verdict to Knoxville High. First row, left to right—R. Bowen, L. Richardson, C. Anderson, B. Ellis, G. Parker, B. Pence, J. Ferguson, P. Hayes and I. Walden; second row, left to right—J. Crawford, R. McDonald, W. Cook, J. Derrick, H. Hodges, G. Lankford, P. Black, C. Cathcart, J. Fore and F. Lee. Back row, left to right—J. Riedinger, B. Lowery, E. Hinson, F. Knight, H. Monsees, Captain C. Gurley, H. Inge, H. Taylor, J. Lunsford and B. Dart.

PARADE READY FOR BOYS' HIGH

Huge Affair Tonight To Welcome Purple Eleven For Big Game.

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 29.—A mammoth night parade, the largest ever held in Miami, will trek through the principal streets of the city Wednesday night in the first of a series of entertainments featuring Georgia-Miami week. A number of bands, bugle corps and speakers will follow the parade in Bay Front park.

A big reception has been planned for the Boys' High team which arrives here late Wednesday afternoon.

PLAY MIAMI

Boys' High plays Miami High Thursday night in the first of two big games featuring Georgia-Miami week. The University of Georgia Bulldogs play Miami University Friday night in the beautiful new Burdine Stadium, the annual Orange Bowl game will be played January 2.

Miami High held a long rough workout this afternoon and has scheduled another long drill Wednesday afternoon, shortly before Boys' High arrives.

It's the one big game of the year for Miami High and the rubber game of the series started back in 1932. Boys' High won the first two, the third was tied and Miami High came back with victories in 1936 and 1937. The 1938 game, the last of the season, checked a 33-game winning streak for Boys' High.

The score was 7-0. Last year the Stingers won a one-point victory at Ponce de Leon park in Atlanta. The Miami High team is in the best physical condition of the year with the exception of two players. One of the linemen and a halfback are suffering from severe bruises but will be in the battle.

MIAMI'S KIWANIS CLUB. Miami's Kiwanis Club is sponsoring the game for the big charity fund to help underprivileged children of the city.

The advance ticket sale already has far exceeded expectations and all indications point to one of the largest crowds of the season.

Officials of both the Kiwanis Club and Miami High school are looking forward to more than 12,000 spectators Thursday night.

Boys' High Leaves. For Miami Game.

The Purple Hurricane of Boys' High embarked last night to South Florida's city, where only zephyrs and faint breezes blow, to put the finishing touches on their 1938 grid campaign with a fracas against the Miami High Stingers Thursday night. The melee is to usher in festivities in the Florida city's "Miami-Georgia" week-end, which will be terminated by Friday night's meeting of Georgia's Bulldogs and the University of Miami.

Coach Shorty Doyal took a squad of 25 players with which he hopes to down the always tough Miami High grid team.

YATES TO SPEAK. COLUMBUS, Ga., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Charlie Yates, of Atlanta, British amateur golf champion and winner of numerous titles in the United States including the Georgia amateur crown, will speak at a luncheon meeting of the Columbus Rotary Club tomorrow.

G.M.A. Presents Record For Title Consideration

Cadets Have Played Required Number of G. I. A. A. Games, Coaches Point Out.

While making no claims, Bud Harris and Capt. J. R. Grayson, Coaches of the Georgia Military Academy eleven, yesterday presented the Cadets' 1938 record as evidence they think should be weighed when the executive committee of the G. I. A. A. convenes in Macon Saturday to clear the muddled conference football race.

Should Jordan defeat Tech High at Columbus Friday, Harris and Grayson declared Jordan would be, so far as they were concerned, the undisputed champions. But if Tech High wins, Cadet supporters believe G. M. A. and Monroe would be thrown into a playoff for the championship.

"Contrary to general knowledge, we have played the required three games," explained Harris. "In fact, we have played four games in the conference, being the only team to beat Tech High this season, in addition to scoring decisive wins over Commercial and Darlington High of Rome."

Boys' High handed G. M. A. its lone conference loss by a 13-7 score.

Coaches Harris and Grayson pointed out that as they saw it, Monroe was undisputed G. I. A. A. leader with two victories, no defeats and one tie. They revealed that Red Barron, Monroe coach, did not believe Monroe deserved the crown without first competing in a playoff with some team to be selected by the executive committee.

Harris and Grayson further pointed out that should Tech High beat Jordan, the Smithies, Jordan and Richmond Academy all would have ties as well as losses against their records, whereas G. M. A. has lost one game, but has not been tied.

In event Tech High wins the Jordan game, final G. I. A. A. standings will be as follows:

Team	W.	L.	Tied
Monroe	2	0	1
G. M. A.	3	1	0
Tech High	5	1	1
Jordan	3	1	1
Richmond	4	1	1
Boys' High	4	2	1

A Jordan victory over the Smithies will bring about the following standings, making the Columbus team the undeniable leader:

Team	W.	L.	Tied
Jordan	4	0	1
Monroe	2	0	1
G. M. A.	3	1	0
Richmond	4	1	1
Tech High	4	2	1
Boys' High	4	2	1

Savannah, Lanier, Benedictine, Columbus, Marietta and Commercial either have lost more than two games or have not played the required three contests.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Five players, two from Alabama and three from Auburn, accepted invitations today to compete with the "Greys" in an all-star, North-South football game here January 2.

Mayor W. A. Gunter, promoting renewal of "Blue and Grey" warfare on the gridiron, announced the following had accepted:

Coaches Frank Thomas, of Alabama, and Jack Meagher, of Auburn, will tutor the Southerners, while Coaches Carl Snavely, of Cornell, and Lynn Waldorf, of Northwestern, will handle the Northerners.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Things are looking up for Kankakee (Ill.) High school and Charles Harrison, the veteran coach. Both Navy and Army football captains for 1938 are tackles who learned their football at Kankakee under Harrison.

Army elected Harry Stella, star tackle, who played a large part in beating Navy Saturday, Sunday night. Today Navy named Allen A. Bergner, co-captain of Stella's last team at Kankakee as captain.

Stegeman Reported To Be 'Much Better'

Hospital attaches last night reported the condition of H. J. Stegeman, suffering from a heart attack, as "much better" and said the university dean of men was "out of immediate danger."

"Coach Steg" was stricken at the Tech-Florida football game a couple of weeks ago.

GAME AT MIAMI WILL PRESENT TWO CHAMPIONS

And If They Win Saturday They'll Be Only Unbeaten Bowl Foes.

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 29.—(AP)—A clash of two conference champions, Tennessee and Oklahoma, was arranged today for the seventh Orange Bowl football game here January 2.

Both teams are undefeated and untied so far but have one more game of their regular schedules to play, the Sooners meeting Washington State and Tennessee's Vols countering Mississippi on Saturday.

Chairman Jack Baldwin, of the Orange Bowl committee, said Major Robert R. Neyland, Tennessee coach, informed him tonight the Southeastern conference had approved the Vols' acceptance in a telegraphic poll. Oklahoma won the Big Six title without being scored on by a conference team.

Tennessee and Oklahoma were ranked fourth and fifth in the nation in the final Associated Press football poll, behind Notre Dame, Texas Christian and Duke.

Orange Bowl officials were hopeful the attraction of their meeting might lift the bowl, with a capacity of 23,000, for the first time. In addition, Tropical Park will hold its horse racing program in the morning this year to give the game a clear field in the afternoon.

The largest crowd the stadium has held so far was 18,000 at the city championship high school game last year. The largest Orange Bowl crowd was 16,000 last year, when Auburn defeated Michigan State, 6-0.

Miami University played in the first three bowl games, defeating Manhattan, 7-0, in 1933, losing to Duquesne, 33-7, and to Bucknell, 25-0, the next two years. In 1936 Catholic University, of Washington, nosed out Mississippi, 20-19, and in 1937 Duquesne won a similar victory over Mississippi State, 13-12.

Of Oklahoma's nine opponents so far this season, Rice and Tulsa scored one touchdown apiece. Shut out without a score were Texas, Kansas, Nebraska, Kansas State, Missouri, Iowa State and Oklahoma A. & M.

GREAT VOL RECORD. The Volunteers yielded three points to Sewanee, seven to Clemson and six to Louisiana State and while washed Auburn, Alabama, Citadel, Chattanooga, Vanderbilt and Kentucky.

A report from Norman, Okla., said the Sooners were offered $25,000 to play here and it was assumed a similar offer was made at Knoxville, but the Orange Bowl committee declined to make public the guarantees.

"Present indications are that this will be the outstanding bowl game," said Jack Baldwin, chairman of the Orange Bowl committee, in announcing the selections. "It will be the only clash between two conference champions and, if both teams win their games next Saturday, the only bowl game between two unbeaten elevens."

Tennessee Considered Cotton Bowl's Bid.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Coach Bob Neyland expressed satisfaction today that his undefeated and unbeaten Tennessee Volunteers had been invited to play undefeated and untied Oklahoma in the Miami Orange Bowl January 2.

Neyland said also Tennessee had considered a game in the Dallas Cotton Bowl. A report from Dallas said Texas Christian University accepted a bid to the New Orleans Sugar Bowl only after officials had been unable to obtain a "suitable" foe for the Cotton Bowl.

"We had under consideration the matter of playing in the Cotton Bowl," said the big Tennessee mentor. "Also in other bowls. (Rose, Sugar Bowls.)"

"Evidently we were being considered by the bowl officials also. What happened when the selections were made, I do not know, but we are well satisfied with the Orange Bowl and our undefeated opponents, the University of Oklahoma."

If Neyland felt any disappointment that his team, Southeastern conference champion, was not selected for the Rose Bowl or Sugar Bowl, he gave no indication of it as he sent his squad through a spirited workout in preparation for the final game of the season Saturday against Mississippi in Memphis.

Neyland said he believed Texas Christian and Carnegie Tech formed a good combination for the Sugar Bowl.

Oklahoma Excited Over Orange Bowl Bid.

NORMAN, Okla., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Excitement had gripped the University of Oklahoma campus tonight as word got around that the undefeated Sooners football team would play Tennessee in the Orange Bowl at Miami, Fla., January 2.

Saturday's intersectional game with Washington State here was forgotten for the moment. Students started planning ways to follow the team south.

Bulldogs Leave Tonight for Miami; Mims Stars in Scrimmage

Fight Show Set Tonight At Warren

Glymph, McNett, Hatchery, Gentry, Bynum on 34-Round Card.

Young men of the sock-and-gutted will provide entertainment for Atlanta sports followers tonight at Warren Arena where, beginning at 8:30, a fight card of 34 rounds will be offered. Every bout on the bill shapes up as a slam-banger, as all boys are well known for their aggressiveness and cleverness.

Harold Glymph, Atlanta, and Ray McNett, Memphis star, meet in a 10-rounder. Old-timers say their battle on the Ben Brown-Tommy Beck card here last week was one of the wildest in Atlanta's history. Glymph lost a close decision and is out to even the score.

Grady Gentry, Chattanooga lightweight, meets Kid Hatcher, South Carolina brawler, in an eight-rounder. They fought an eight-round draw here last week.

Paul Bynum, popular young heavyweight, once a star among the amateurs, has a rugged assignment in a six-rounder with Earl Johnson, who knows most of the answers.

Billy Johnson and Billy Martinez tangle in a four and there will be an additional four-rounder.

Prices have been slashed in half. Promoters believe fans will like this show and since no unusual expense is involved, such as bringing in talent from distant places, the card is being offered at low rates.

JACK FOX WINS.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(UP)—“Tiger” Jack Fox, of Spokane, Wash., scored a convincing, if not sensational, victory over Al Gainer, of New Haven, Conn., at the coliseum tonight to clinch a bout with Melio Bettina, of Beacon, N. Y., for the New York version of the world's light-heavyweight title.

Turnesa Boys Play In 'Old-Young' Meet

AUGUSTA, Ga., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Three Turnesa brothers, Mike, Joe and Bill, spent today polishing up their shots for the “Old-Youngster” tourney over the Forest Hills course here Thursday afternoon. A fourth Turnesa brother, Willie, an amateur, will not play.

The Turnesaes are teamed with Tommy Armour, Henry Picard, captained by Gene Sarazen, against a professional group headed by Horton Smith, who hasn't announced his lineup.

WILL ENTER RACES

JUGG BRYANT

10 Drivers Enter Speed Events Sunday

Ten drivers have now entered for the national championship 50-mile stock car race to be held at Lakewood next Sunday with only three more places left for assured qualifiers to start in the half-century grind.

Latest entrants to come into the fold are Jugg Bryant, Knoxville, Tenn., who will drive a Studebaker, and Winfield Wolf, Atlanta, entered in a Willys.

Although Harley Taylor has sold the stock car in which he made such a good showing on Armistice Day he is being offered numerous mounts for Sunday and still retains his position in the front row. Jan Haakinson wants to start. Thirteenth and carry No. 13.

The first 12 to enter need not compete in qualification races.

The alignment of early entries is:

First row: Shelley Goff, Ford V-8; Harley Taylor, car unnamed.

Second row: Gordon Bracken, Ford V-8; Red Singleton, Chrysler.

Third row: Larry Beckett, Ford V-8; Chuck Laury, 1939 Ford.

Fourth row: Ralph Crouch, 1939 Mercury; Winfield Wolf, Willys.

Fifth row: Jugg Bryant, Studebaker; next car to enter.

After entering Cauley in the race Monday afternoon, Crouch also made entry early Tuesday morning. The wealthy West Virginian left for Beckley with Mrs. Crouch and says he will bring back a Mercury to drive himself and says “friendship will cease when Charlie and I get on the track.”

Sugar Bowl Ignores S.E.C. for First Time

Alabama's "Slighting" of New Orleans Game Last Year Is Given As Reason.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 29.—(AP)—The New Orleans Sugar Bowl reached outside the Southeastern Conference for the first time today for its fifth annual football classic when Carnegie Tech, of Pittsburgh, and Texas Christian University of Fort Worth, were named as the opponents for January 2, 1939.

For the first time the Sugar Bowl officials found themselves in the fortuitous position of being able to pick and choose from a wealth of football material with national ranking and some professional to see in ignoring the Southeastern conference a retaliatory slap. Despite repeated efforts of the New Orleans Midwinter Sports Association to perfect a tieup with the Southeastern conference which would present at league's champion annually as the defending team nothing has come of them.

Last year Alabama, the Southeastern champion, held aloof from a Sugar Bowl bid until one came from the California Rose Bowl. Some football followers professed to see in that a Southeastern conference slight of the Sugar Bowl. This year, anxious to obtain the best football teams in the country, the Sugar Bowl folks did not wait for the end of the Southeastern season but went north and east with feelers, got at least five nibbles and an acceptance from the Carnegie Tech Skiboos. They sent out a feeler to Fort Worth, too, and got straight talk from there—never mind sending a committee; we want a Rose Bowl bid and if it doesn't come we will play for you. When the Rose Bowl selected Duke the die was cast.

Thus, eliminating Notre Dame, which was ranked first in the final Associated Press poll for a national champion but which would not play a Bowl game, New Orleans found itself with the teams ranked first and fifth, as against the second and seventh ranking teams in the Rose Bowl.

T. C. U. will be playing a return engagement in the Sugar Bowl, having defeated L. S. U. in the bowl's second game by a score of 3-2 in 1936. It will be the first time south for Carnegie Tech.

The share of each team January 2 should run towards $50,000. The first Sugar Bowl game produced $20,000 each for Tulane and Temple; the second $7,000 each for T. C. U. and L. S. U.; the third, $39,000 each for L. S. U. and Santa Clara.

Coach Bernie Moore, of Louisiana State University, refused to comment other than to observe “I picked two very fine teams.”

Coach Harry Mehre, of the University of Mississippi, said he believed the officials overlooked the best match by not pairing Tennessee and Texas Christian instead of Carnegie Tech and Texas Christian. Tennessee-T. C. U. game would have the nation's outstanding Bowl game, he said. Mehre's Rebels will play Tennessee this Saturday.

HAYES UNDER KNIFE.

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Jackie Hayes, Chicago White Sox second baseman, will undergo an operation tomorrow on a trick knee which bothered him most of last season. Dr. Phil Kreuscher, club physician, said today.

DUKE'S HERO, PERDUE

In one of those long-to-be-remembered deeds of the gridiron Willard Perdue (above), of Duke, blocked a kick in the Duke-Pitt game at Durham, N. C., then fell on the ball behind the Panther goal line to win the game, 7 to 0. Coming in the fourth quarter, just as in all good football movies, it left a crowd of 52,000 breathless.

Chivington and Wood Make Duke's Star '11

DURHAM, N. C., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Dick Cassiano, Pittsburgh's fast-stepping halfback, was the only unanimous choice of an all-opponents team selected today by Duke's Blue Devils who will be the eastern team in the Tournament of Roses game at Pasadena, Cal., January 2.

Five players pooled all but one of the 20 votes cast. They were Ed (Ty) Coon, N. C. State tackle; Bill Daddio, Pittsburgh end; George Stinewiss, North Carolina quarterback; Marshall Goldberg, Pitt fullback who won a halfback spot, and Joe Hoague, college fullback.

The team with number of votes received: Ends, Daddio, Pittsburgh (19) and Kline, North Carolina (9); tackles, Coon, N. C. State (19) and Wood, Georgia Tech (13); guards, Petro, Pittsburgh (18) and Trunzo, Wake Forest (15); center, Chivington, Georgia Tech (18); quarterback, Stinewiss, North Carolina (19); halfbacks, Goldberg, Pittsburgh (19), and Cassiano, Pittsburgh (20); fullback, Hoague, Colgate (19).

GEORGIA PASSER SHOWS PROMISE AS BALL CARRIER

31 Players To Make Trip; Ned Barbre Re-Injures Knee.

By EDWARD M. MILLSAPS. ATHENS, Ga., Nov. 29.—Priming for their season's gridiron finale, the University of Georgia footballers went through the last hard scrimmage of the year this afternoon in preparation for the impending clash with Miami University Saturday.

With the freshman squad furnishing opposition, the varsity worked on both defense and offense against Miami formations.

MIMS STARS. Varying from his usual role as ace passer, Tailback Billy Mims starred as a ball carrier.

Mims, the slender Atlanta, upon whose shoulders Coach Joel Hunt places the execution of the Bulldogs' aerial attack, demonstrated he is not only an accurate passer, but a runner of no mean ability as well by breaking through the Bullpup line and skirting the end for long gains several times during the afternoon.

As usual, big Jim Fordham, the junior fullback, picked up many a yard by driving through the forward wall with terrific force.

While the varsity was on defense against the Miamians' running attack, Knox Eldredge, end, and Smiley Jackson, guard. Stood out for their fine work.

The Red and Black squad's morale is at the season's height in spite of the fact that two regulars, Marvin Gillespie and Dooley Matthews, are definitely lost in the final game, and two others are in very doubtful condition.

WILHITE OUT. Clayton Wilhite, regular tackle, is still on the shelf with a knee injury sustained in the Georgia Tech encounter, and Ned Barbre, a senior end, may have completed his football career at Georgia. Barbre had to be taken from the field this afternoon after he received a blow on an old knee injury.

Coach Hunt announced that 31 Bulldogs would make the year's final trek into foreign territory. They will embark from Athens at 7:15 tomorrow evening with a stopover workout scheduled for Thursday at Fort Lauderdale.

Miami Works Against Georgia Formations.

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Determined to leave no holes unplugged for the Georgia football game Friday night, Coach Jack Harding kept his Miami Hurricanes on defense against Bulldog plays for more than an hour in scrimmage today.

On offense the Miami outlook appeared bright. Several of the reserve backs have shown so much improvement lately that two starting assignments probably will remain in doubt until just before the game.

Halfbacks Grant Stockdale and Halvick and fullback George Waldeck, all third stringers, got loose for nice runs in the scrimmage.

Captain Eddie Dunn is certain to start at left half and Andy Casky at quarter, but Mike Corrigan and Carl Jones are battling for the right half position and Johnny Noppenberg is pushing Terry Fox for the fullback berth.

SKATE ACROSS U.S.

FISHER, ARBOGAST.

Michigan Youths Hope To Skate 4,200 Miles

By MELVIN PAZOL.

Pictured above are two youths from Grand Haven, Mich., who rolled into Atlanta yesterday en route to San Francisco via skates—a distance of 4,200 miles.

Al Fisher and Courtney Arbogast left their home town of Grand Haven on October 24 with $500 prize money waiting for each at San Francisco—provided they reach their destination—going by way of West Palm Beach, Fla., within six months. They are both 23 years old.

Amazing as is the boys' stamina and determination in crossing the country on skates is their statement here yesterday that they expect to skate back home via the northern route. They hope to be back home July 4.

“We'll have plenty of time and money then, and can enjoy the trip more,” Fisher stated.

The boys skate about 50 miles a day, trying to make a town of some size each night. They came by way of Peoria and Cairo, Ill.; St. Louis, Mo.; Nashville and Chattanooga. They expect to reach West Palm Beach by December 17. There they meet their sponsor, Joe Davis Jr., manager of the Barn Skating Rink, in Grand Haven.

They left Chattanooga Saturday afternoon and arrived here yesterday noon. They'll rest here a day or so, maybe doing odd jobs to replenish their finances, before proceeding south.

SWOLLEN FEET.

Arbogast said that his feet were swollen so after the first day out that he could hardly put his shoes on after removing them at night. “It's not so bad now, for all the blisters have turned to callouses,” he said.

They wire their sponsor each night and several Michigan radio stations report their progress upon receipt of post cards from towns along the way.

The worst part of the trip is having to take off their skates and walk across dirt and pebble lined roads, or rough asphalt.

Asked when they expect to reach San Francisco, Fisher stated April 15 would be fine.

VILLANOVA GETS COTTON BOWL BID NEW YEAR'S DAY

Answer Awaited; Clemson Interested in Post Season Game.

DALLAS, Tex., Nov. 29.—(AP)—The Cotton Bowl Athletic Association tonight was notified it would receive an answer tomorrow to its invitation to meet unbeaten Villanova College to play on New Year's Day.

“Invitation appreciated. Athletic board unable to reach immediate decision. Will answer definitely Wednesday,” said a messenger to Cotton Bowl director, from the Rev. M. Albers, moderator of athletics at Villanova.

Meanwhile, inquiries were received from other institutions interested in sending their teams to Dallas. Among these were undefeated, untied Georgetown at Washington and Clemson College of Greenville, S. C., which lost this year only to Tennessee.

At Lubbock, Coach Pete Cawthon said a post-season game scheduled next Saturday between Tech and Centenary had been cancelled by mutual agreement after the Red Raiders accepted the Cotton Bowl invitation.

L. S. U. Ace Reveals He Wed Jan. 1937

BATON ROUGE, La., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Guy (Cotton) Milner revealed today for the past two seasons he played football for Louisiana State in violation of one of the squad's strict rules.

Right Halfback Milner ended his career with the Tigers last Saturday in the final game against Tulane.

HOME RULE BILL TO SIMPLIFY VOTE WILL BE OFFERED

Modified Version of Local Control Suggested To Simplify Task of Citizens at the Polls.

Modified home rule for Georgia cities and counties yesterday was proposed to simplify and shorten the state election ballot when Fulton legislators and election managers discussed the problem.

Following pledges of support by Representatives Cicero Kendrick and Paul S. Etheridge, election managers designated a special subcommittee to confer with Representative Helen Douglas Mankin and Senator G. Everett Millican, who did not attend. The group later will hold a conference with Attorney General M. J. Yeomans in an effort to prepare a bill or series of bills to accomplish the objective—a shorter and more simplified ballot.

Discussions developed that some kind of modified home rule provisions will be mandatory if voters of Georgia are to be relieved of the necessity of voting on large numbers of constitutional amendments in every election. It also was pointed out that a constitutional amendment probably will be necessary to relieve voters from passing on judges and solicitors general from every court circuit in Georgia.

"Purge" Progresses.

Election managers and representatives conferred yesterday on the short and simplified ballot, but it was reported that the second undertaking is a much more difficult weeks ago by the group—a purge of Atlanta and Fulton county registration lists—is progressing.

By the end of the week, the Fulton county board of registrars will submit lists of voters they have not been able to check to managers for their purge. Managers agreed to assist in culling all ineligible voters from the lists and registrars have accepted the proffered aid.

Members of the special subcommittee, who will attempt to have necessary bills drawn to effect the short ballot, are Press Huddleston, chairman of the special committee of election managers; Charlie Bernhard and Marvin Roan.

21 Local Amendments.

Only two of the 23 constitutional amendments presented voters in the September 14 primary were of state-wide application, all others being local, election managers pointed out.

The effort is to relieve the state ballot of the names of judges and solicitors general except in the circuit to which the officials are elected, and to permit cities and counties to govern themselves without being forced to seek state-wide approval for internal affairs.

Etheridge pointed out that a

Newly-Elected Officers of Georgia's Manufacturers

Constitution Staff Photo—Slayton. Newly elected officers of the reorganized Georgia Manufacturers' Association, now the Associated Industries of Georgia, discuss problems facing industry under government control. The officers are, left to right, Stuart Broman, of Atlanta, president; M. E. Dyess, of Augusta; and C. F. Stone, of Atlanta, vice president, and Norman Elsas, of Atlanta, treasurer.

new constitution is needed badly for the state.

"Our last constitutional convention was held in 1877 and I doubt if a single constitutional lawyer in Georgia knows what the present document with its hundreds of amendments really means," he added.

"If we could do something to correct the defects of the present constitution, I believe the problem of a short and simplified ballot will be solved automatically."

Home Rule Bill.

Kendrick asserted: "This simmers down in the final analysis to whether one favors or opposes home rule. I do not believe the legislature is yet ready to approve a home rule bill. In fact, I think that is a long way off. I, however, am sympathetic with what you are trying to do and am sure that all members of the Fulton delegation will co-operate fully."

Senator Millican was out of the city and did not attend yesterday's meeting. He, however, already has announced he will co-operate.

William Brandt, secretary of the committee, announced that Millican proposes to introduce "a measure in the next session of the legislature to make the ballot itself secret by taking from the ballot itself the numbers it has carried in the past."

The Millican bill, Brandt explained, will provide for a system of numbering of the stubs, but the number on the ballot can be detached in order to prevent its later identification with the person who voted it.

CRIPPLED YOUTH SEEKS RETURN OF STOLEN PUP

A plea for the return of a lost puppy, supposedly taken by hick-hikers, has been made by a Florence, S. C., mother, whose small son, confined to his bed with a broken back, is grieving for the return of his four-footed companion.

The pup, a Boston bull, with a black and white head and a black ring around the right eye, was taken from the home of Mrs. E. S. Holley, 1213 West Palmetto street, Florence, sometime last week by two persons thought to be on their way to Atlanta.

Law to Aid Persecuted of Germany May Be Put Up to Georgia's Russell

Senator Is in Strategic Position as Chairman of Immigration Committee: Letters Requesting Help Pour Into His Office From All Over Nation.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS. WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Because of increasing persecutions of minorities by Germany and Italy, Georgia's junior senator, Richard B. Russell Jr., as chairman of the committee on immigration of the upper chamber, may be called upon to play an important part in framing legislation to take care of the situation.

Ever since the assassination of Ernst Vom Rath, German diplomat in Paris, some two weeks ago which loosed Reichsfuehrer Hitler's fury on the Jews, letters have been pouring into the capital office of Senator Russell from all over the nation urging action by congress. These letters have been forwarded to the senator at his home in Windsor for the chairman's personal consideration.

President Roosevelt, while sympathetic, has let it be known he does not favor a letting down of our immigration bars.

Whatever the Chief Executive may do, the new congress which convenes January 3 undoubtedly will be called upon through its senate and house committees on immigration to recommend measures recognizing the Jews' plight.

Assuming the chairmanship of the senate committee on immigration two years ago when its then chairman, Senator Marcus A. Coolidge, of Massachusetts, died, Russell has plenty of time to familiarize himself with immigration problems of the country. He will be expected by both the administration and friends of the Jews to steer the senate through a safe course as far as more liberal Jewish immigration laws may be concerned.

The Older We Grow, the More Firmly Fixed Our Habits Become

Young Can Fight Troubles Which Down the Oldsters

By Caroline Chatfield.

Dear Miss Chatfield: When you are young and troubles hit you, you have something to fight with; but when you get older they get you down. My children are all married and have children and I am left alone but for a drinking husband who gets worse and worse as the years go by. His language is something fearful when he's drunk. There are no names he doesn't call me, and there are only a few sins he doesn't accuse me of. The boys know what an awful life I am forced to lead and each of them offers me a home, provided I will leave their father but they all feel that on account of their families they shouldn't have him around. I can't blame them. More than once I have noted the wise advice you have given others and since I am so worried that I can't think clearly, I'm asking you to talk over my situation with me.

My dear woman, that the habits of a lifetime are as firmly fixed in your case as they are in the case of your husband's case. Year in, year out you have lived in that home, gone about your duties, waited for that husband to come home, always uneasy perhaps, but expectant. Sometimes you have been pleasantly surprised at his arriving sober, in a good humor as a husband should. Sometimes you have been grieved at his arriving light, cantankerous and critical. But you have the habit of expecting him.

Answer: There's something to be said on both sides of the question as to who can best cope with troubles, the old or the young. It's true the young have something to fight with which the old haven't. But the old have something that enables them to be resigned to fate, which the young haven't. And it must be true that after a woman has reared a family of children, seen them safely happily married she has that satisfaction to bank on which the later years bring sorrow and trouble.

A grandfather so steeped in alcohol that he calls his wife vile names and accuses her of crimes is not likely to reform. He's past the age that he might be helped by scientific treatment. He's sunk too low to be pulled up by appeals to his manhood and his sense of decency. He has destroyed all his finer instincts. And his wife has to resign herself to more of the same sort of treatment she's been getting or put him out to live in the gutter. Who can tell her what her duty is? Not I.

But I would point out to you,

Your roots have struck deeper into that home than you realize while it is still yours. The homely duties which at times have seemed monotonous are a routine which you would sorely miss in another's home. The worn rug on the floor, the creaking cinder, the view out the window, the cup in which you drink your morning coffee, the bed on which you sleep; all these things have become a part of your existence. They have taken on the guise of old and dear friends. Were you to abandon them, I'm afraid you would find that new ones wouldn't take their place.

Remember, too, that the sons and their families are leading lives totally different from the life you are accustomed to, leading lives into which you cannot enter fully, however considerate the daughters-in-law might be of you. You would be, at best, an honored guest in their home; at worst, an unwelcome old lady whom they'd prefer not to have around were circumstances different.

When you have mulled over these matters you will be able to make a wise decision about your future. A nice long visit to the children will give you a chance to think and a fine opportunity to see the life of the land in their neighborhoods.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Rich Throat and Neck Oil Prevents Crepey Throats and Drawn Skin Areas

By LILLIAN MAE.

Getting Ready For the Xmas Holidays

By Elizabeth Boykin.

"We're rushing around with tape line and bank book these days," writes Mrs. F. R., "to try to get the house fixed up for Christmas. Will you help us make our selections? The living room is our most immediate concern. It's 17x11 feet and papered in ivory tones with a flowered design of rust and chertreuse. The studio couch is rust; one easy chair is green and we have two green throw rugs. We've bought crew curtains for the three front windows.

"The question is—what color rug should we get? Would solid tan or beige be appropriate? Could we use one pair of draperies for the three windows (which are less than a foot apart) and connect them with a valance? And what kind of draperies would you advise? We need a desk of some kind. Would a knee-hole desk or a secretary be more suitable?"

I'd prefer the plain beige rug, as you suggest, in this room. And now would chertreuse be for draperies? Yes, I think one pair of draperies with a valance across the top would be all right; then, however, be sure to have the ecur curtains extend all the way over the spaces between the windows. And be sure that both glass curtains and draperies are plenty full. Perhaps a secretary would be more useful here since it provides more storage space than the flat top desk. Besides, one high piece helps balance the design of the room. Perhaps you could repeat the chertreuse in a pair of side chairs. And I'd like to see some dramatic big pieces of copper for accessories.

Another Study in Beige. Then there is the problem that Mrs. V. Z. brings up. Her walls are beige with mahogany colored woodwork and her rug is soft light red. The sofa and one easy chair are mulberry. New covers are needed for the other chairs and Mrs. Z. asks us to suggest what would be best. And what about curtains? She has lace panels that could be used with draperies, or she could get new glass curtains entirely and wonders whether lace with slipper satin draperies would be too formal—if not she'd like it. But she has draperies for the large door into the dining room or just a valance? What for lamps and accessories?

Solution. First, I'd like to see that dark woodwork painted beige to match the walls. Then I'd choose a gay linen or chintz for chair covers and for draperies—something with a light blue ground and fresh flower colors. I'm a little dubious about satin here—it would take such a lot of living up to in other things. And the room seems to need pattern. Use the lace curtains, however—they'd be charming. I'd leave the door plain without either drapery or valance. White or gold would be my choice for lamps and accessories.

(Copyright, 1938, for The Constitution.)

Look to those necks, throats and shoulders! Else you'll look like—well, to say the least, you'll look terrible when you break down and twirl your hair high for the all-important date some night. And then it will be entirely too late to do anything about it. Not only age and weather, but coat collars and high collared dark dresses cause necks and throats to look dry, weather-beaten and dark. So you see, it's necessary to work regularly and well to have that alabaster look that's so necessary to an attractive, well-groomed appearance.

I'm constantly on the alert for items which will keep down, or help relieve these conditions which are often overlooked as "finishing touches"—touches which make one really well-groomed, and without which there is just an indication of carelessness.

By Harold Sharpsteen.

"Will you please advise me how I am ever to know when my partner really means business responding one notrump to my opening trump suit bid?" Mrs. A. E. Michaelson, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Devoted Culbertsonians who adhere strictly to strong, distributionally frequent pick up hands containing excellent notrump possibilities that fail to fulfill Culbertson's iron-clad opening notrump demands.

"BACK INTO" NOTRUMP. To overcome this obstacle there has been a justifiable tendency to "back into" notrump contracts to first naming a suit and bidding notrump on the second round. The plan works satisfactorily except when partner steals opener's thunder by stepping in with a notrump take out, which is undoubtedly one of the situations the lady from Grand Rapids is inquiring about. Culbertson requires four honor-tricks minimum and a 4-3-3-3 hand pattern for one notrump opening. Conceivably opening bidder may hope to land in an eventual game contract in notrump, holding:

S-K Q J 9: H-Q 10 8; D-J 7; C-A J 9 7.

HANDS LAKE REQUIREMENTS. But, a notrump opening is barred, with a 4-4-3-2 hand pattern, except when the two four-card lengths are minor suits, so the bidding opens one club with the danger of being left in very remote.

To Step Up in Life, Know the Little Niceties

A step up, the Burtons hoped! Sunday night supper at the domestic manager's home. But Mrs. Burton's table manners gave her away. See how she grips her knife and fork instead of leaving them on her plate when she passes it for a second helping. Her other offenses were as bad. She clutched her goblet near the brim, blew on her soup to cool it, put olive pits in the ash tray. Tut, Mr. Burton, people who want to rise in the world must know better than that! Hold your goblet by the stem. Never blow on food to cool it. Put olive pits on your bread-and-butter plate. So many little points to betray the socially inexperienced—but Now I've found a cylindrical bottle with a red plastic screw-cap top, containing a rich oil for throat and neck massage, and treatment for crepey skin areas. It should be warmed slightly and massaged over neck and throat which has been thoroughly cleansed and toned. And it may be used over your entire face as an excellent treatment for those crepey areas. For face it is best mixed with tissue cream, though it is effective alone.

Perhaps you object to the oily odor of oils. I do, just on general principle. But this product has sufficient bouquet fragrance to kill the other, and to make it altogether pleasant to use. Phone me, and I'll tell you the name of the oil and where it may be obtained. Write me if you live outside Atlanta, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

The same action is likely to follow, holding:

S-K Q 9: H-Q 4 3; D-K J 8; C-A 10 8 6.

S-Q 10 5; H-A 9; D-Q 3; C-A 10 8 6 5.

S-Q 6 3; H-J 2; D-A 7 6; C-A K J 6 4.

The Culbertson system permits an occasional "change of pace" in notrump openings with hands distributed 5-3-3-2 or 6-3-2-2 when the long suit is a set-up minor, or nearly so, and doubletons are topped by Kings.

But, whenever the bidding goes: South, 1 club; West, pass; North, 1 notrump; East, pass. A question arises.

MAKES URGENT INQUIRY. If North's notrump is negative, based on a couple of Queens or conceivably a King and a queen, game at notrump appears doubtful, but should North possess additional values it may be a different story.

The only way for South to find out is by asking. He inquires by rebidding two notrump, which is one way of saying:

"Partner, if you responded on a minimum, pass. With added strength go on to game."

For in the Culbertson system, or any other modern bidding code, one in a suit . . . pass . . . one notrump . . . pass . . . two notrump . . . means just that. 'Till tomorrow.

HollywoodScout Brings News Of the Stars

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 29.—Frank Morgan's hair has turned snow-white. He explains why: "I was riding" in a car from Palm Springs, minding my own business—by that, I mean I was asleep—when suddenly I found myself underneath six orange trees." It seems that the gentleman who was driving the car was also asleep. The vehicle was demolished, and the madly shaken Mr. Morgan attributes his escape from similar demolition to the fact that he is now portraying the Wizard of Oz. Or maybe he is just lucky.

Freddie Bartholomew returned to Hollywood from his personal appearance tour richer by $20,000, but Aunt Cissie says that it will take more than that to put his bank account in the black. Nelson Eddy and Mrs. Ann Franklin are now at the love stage of shopping for the express purpose of trimming a barrel waist down to a spool waist. The lady will be getting the biggest male earner in Hollywood. Nelson has three large sources of income—movies, radio and concerts.

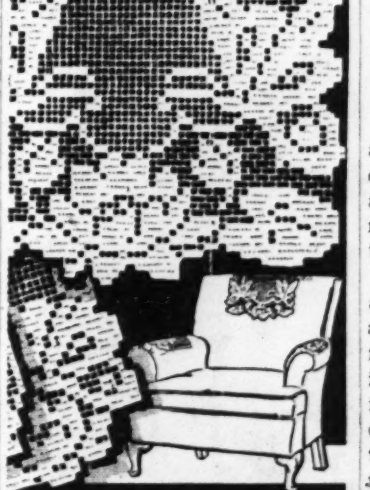

Talking about houses, Clark Gable, rumored to be building a mansion in Hollywood, denies this with "I'm not building anything until I know exactly what's happening." He can only be referring to his long held-up divorce from Mrs. Rhea Gable. Danielle Darrieux, having exhausted all her excuses about not coming back here, is now reduced to the simple explanation that she doesn't want to return. Ina Claire's role in "I Take This Woman" has been built up at the expense of Hedy Lamarr's. It has been discovered that the latter has still a lot to learn about acting. But she should worry with a face like that! Spencer Tracy, the Stanley in "Stanley and Livingstone," is worried because "Twentieth Century-Fox has so far been unable to find a Livingstone. Why don't they let Spencer find him?" Brian Aherne is sporting a black eye which he says he got via a revolving door! Boris Karloff denies that he is calling his newly arrived baby "The Daughter of Frankenstein." Paulette Goddard is rated the best shopper in town. There is nothing indecent about her way of buying. She just says, "I'll take this—that—and that." Nice—if you have the money.

Cary Grant told an intimate, just before he went abroad, that he was ready for marriage. But there is nothing untoward about Phyllis Brooks, who flew to New York to meet him on his return. Personally, I think they will get married, and that Phyllis will make Cary an excellent wife. Barbara Stanwyck has installed a private telephone in her dressing room on the set—for personal calls to Robert Taylor. But, in spite of this, the heat of this romance has cooled a little—according to those who should know. Constantine Bennett will shortly adopt a little girl.

Shirley Temple's bungalow at the Desert Inn in Palm Springs, has been redecorated, and redecorated with a bottle of milk. Shirley is now in residence and spending all her waking hours in violent exercise in hopes of growing taller and thinner. . . . Oliver Hardy was recently told by a fan, "You sure are a great actor. I think you're immense." Oliver hoped he was referring to his talent and not his 300-odd pounds of weight. P. S.: These two weighty items in the same paragraph are purely coincidental.

If You Can't Touch Your Toes, Better Exercise

By Ida Jean Kain.

If you have a barrel waist, you can't do the minut-in-swing, squeeze into the new spool-waisted frocks, or even bend down and touch your toes.

Bending down to touch the hands to the toes was never any good as an exercise, but it is a fine test of suppleness. If you can't do it, you are not supple, and that means you look older than you should, and maybe a little dowdy.

What I am trying to do is make you mad—mad enough so that you will do your waistline exercises! Your waist should only be four and one-half times the measure of your wrist, according to Hollywood's streamline limit. But if your waist is eight inches less than the bust measurement, with weight at normal, that is as slim as anyone could wish. If it is more than eight inches less, you must exercise.

Here are three exercises designed for the express purpose of trimming a barrel waist down to a spool waist. Ease into your waistline shearing with this one: Stand erect in good posture, with the hips tucked in and the tummy pulled up, and with hands clasped behind the back and between the shoulder blades. Push up with the clasped hands as high as possible, stretching the waist slim and bending the head back to increase the stretch. Feel the pull on those waistline muscles? That's slimming!

The second exercise puts a twist on the waistline. Stand with the knees on the floor, feet back, but separated, and constantly pull up and in with the tummy muscles. Have the arms out at the sides shoulder level. Twist at the waist to the right, bend back and touch the right hand to the left heel. Pivot at the waist in the opposite direction and touch the left hand to the right heel. This is no kindergarten exercise and three times for each side will be enough to start you off.

Another upward stretch for slimming the midsection is this one: Stand in erect posture, arms down at the sides. Fling the arms high overhead as you raise alternate knees high in air.

If you mean business, you can take more than an inch off the waist in a week, and every inch you take off your waistline makes you look two years younger. Soon you can be mistaken for your daughter's slightly older sister.

My Day: McIntyre "Memorial" Dedicated by President

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla.—Yesterday afternoon, my husband took a very protesting gentleman, in the front seat of his little open car, immediately after lunch. Mr. McIntyre was as firm as one could be with the President of the United States, in telling him that the weather was too cold for the gentlemen of the press to be interested in visiting any outlying farms, no matter what improvements the President might be anxious to show them. In spite of his usual amableness to such suggestions, the President replied that there was a good story in it for the press, and he was going.

Very reluctantly, apparently, everybody appeared outside of our cottage at 2:15, and as a gesture of conciliation, the President invited Mr. McIntyre to ride with him in the front of his car. He put Miss LeHand, Captain Callahan and myself in the back seat, and then proceeded to drive along the windiest road there is on the mountain, far beyond our destination, because the President, himself, was not quite sure where we were going.

Miss LeHand and I were not ashamed to say that we were gradually becoming icicles, and we finally overcame that masculine aversion to inquiring whether one is on the right road. Eventually we reached a spot where something was shrouded in a white sheet and surrounded by a group of automobiles and people. By that time Mr. McIntyre began to realize that he was probably the victim of this joke, whatever it might be. When they handed the President the string to unveil "the monument," and a member of the press made a speech dedicating a new "memorial," he was quite sure something was up. Finally the President drew the string, and a beautiful new sign, far cleaner than any others on the reservation, announced that this was a memorial to Marvin Hunter McIntyre—"The Possum Preserve"—and the President handed him a deed to the property, which might not be strictly legal, but which is made out in the President's own hand. Just to warm up we sang "Happy Birthday to You," and then drove to the Marine encampment, where the Marines were giving an exhibition drill for the patients of the Foundation.

They had hoped for a warm day, and had spread out an exhibition of weapons and equipment on a table, to show their young visitors. It was too cold, however, for most of them to get out of their cars, but they enjoyed the drill and the hot chocolate and the cakes which were given to them afterward. The Colonel told us all his "boys" had been anxious to do something for the patients. Miss Thompson and I left just before the ambassadors arrived, and I was very sorry not to see them, especially our old friend Mr. Phillips, for I should have liked to have news of his wife and children. We are on our way to spend a few days in Florida with my aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. David Gray.

Best of all, this is a dress you can make in no time. It's a diagram design, so that you'll spend the minimum of time cutting it out, and putting it together. Washington Seminary Girls To Stage Benefit Bridge Tomorrow

Proceeds To Aid Young Georgians To Secure Education at Tallulah

By Sally Forth.

MEMBERS of the Washington Seminary Circle of the Tallulah Falls School are laying aside their pleasures this week, and some of their studies, too, perhaps, to lend their efforts for sweet charity's sake. Tomorrow at 3 o'clock, they will stage a mammoth benefit bridge party at Rich's tearoom, and over 200 reservations have already been made. So the success of the venture is practically assured.

The prize committee, which includes Caroline Yundt, Jeannette Estes, and Jean McIntosh, has been truly busy, but not without the success that usually crowns their enthusiastic efforts. For among the grand prizes for which you will play your best bridge are such things as a radio, an order for a dress, a glider, and any number of other useful and pretty articles. Following the game, tea will be served to the guests.

And of course there will be delicious candy for sale, the candy committee including Lucille Brewster, chairman; Mary Frances Broach, Jane Carmichael, Blanche Parks, Betty Gill, Genevieve Stevens and Jean McIntosh.

The officers of the circle, who are in charge of the benefit, proceeds from which will aid Georgia mountain boys and girls to secure an education at the Tallulah School, are Jean McIntosh, president; Mary Frances Broach, vice president; Jeannette Estes, secretary; and Betty Carver, treasurer.

BETTY YOPP and Bungy Fuller, who are students at Oglethorpe, had such a good time visiting Betty's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Beauchamp Coppedge, in East Orange, N. J., during the Thanksgiving holidays that they hardly missed being in Atlanta. But then it seemed so much like Atlanta, according to Betty, that one couldn't possibly get homesick. For Bryant Jones, McKee Nunnally, Pat Dinkins, and Dan Hodgson joined the girls and made it a regular Atlanta house party.

All kinds of parties and good times were planned for the guests and there was not a dull moment. In addition, everything was covered with a deep blanket of snow, and the Atlantans experienced the thrill of real winter sports.

PEACH MEN DISCUSS PROMOTIONAL DRIVE

Tri-State Organization Is Urged; Co-operation of Truckers Asked.

MACON, Ga., Nov. 29. (AP)—Georgia peach growers, meeting here today, discussed a proposed tri-state promotional organization and adopted a resolution asking appointment of a committee to work with trucking interests.

Spokesmen from North and South Carolina pledged co-operation in forming a promotion body to function for those states and Georgia.

John T. McKenzie, of Monticello, introduced the resolution seeking closer co-operation with trucking companies, and it was approved unanimously.

The resolution stated that Georgia growers "desire to encourage said truck transportation in order to bring about a more profitable and a wider distribution of our fruits." It also asked that the committee obtain from trucking companies information as to their routes to destination points, just as such information is provided on carlot shipments.

Increasing tendency of Georgia growers to move their crops by trucks also was noted in the resolution.

The meeting, sponsored by the Georgia Association of Peach Growers, attracted nearly 200 growers from the peach belt. Sessions were held in a local hotel under the direction of Wilmer M. Dickey, of Milledgeville, president, and G. Emmett Snellgrove, of Macon, executive director.

T. H. Cribb, of Spartanburg, manager of the South Carolina Peach Growers' Association, told of marketing efforts this year and said South Carolina growers want to join Georgia and North Carolina in promoting sale of the fruit.

Other speakers at the meeting included J. H. Watson, of Monticello, who told of organization counsel for the National Association of Food Chains; Earl C. French, national promotion director of the Atlantic Commission Company; T. Anderson, publisher of the Macon Telegraph and News; Columbus Roberts, Georgia state agricultural department head; and Dr. Robert F. Poole, plant pathologist, of Raleigh, N. C.

ABOVE-FREEZING LOW OF 34 PREDICTED; MAXIMUM YESTERDAY WAS 52.

November continues on its abnormal course today with temperatures in the springlike sixties predicted for the afternoon.

Temperature averages of the drier month have been sketched on charts, with the first 23 days piling up an extra 22 degrees of heat. Then followed four days when the line plummeted below the mean like a Federal Reserve report for 1933.

Yesterday, with a 52 high, and pepped today the curve should show a back up again. An above freezing low of 34 is predicted for this morning.

Keeping with its unusual temperatures, November has far provided the city with an excess of 1.15 inches of rain, the registered normal, or better than normal rainfall. Rainfall deficit for the year, however, still half inches.

Georgians Say They Offer New Revenue.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 29. (AP)—Frank Heyward, Georgia state forester, told a special committee here today "the sustained production of forest lands can provide a new means for small farm owners to obtain revenue" in the south where cotton has failed to be a money crop for many farmers.

The Georgia official, Florida State Forester Harry Lee Baker and representatives of many southeastern associations interested in forestry development, testified before the committee which is seeking data on potential value in the nation's trees and other natural resources.

NAZI FIRMS CLAIM FOREIGN INSURANCE

British Underwriters Primarily Involved in Attempt To Switch Damages.

BERLIN, Nov. 29.—(AP)—German insurance firms made an international question today of claims for damages, which one broker put as high as $520,000,000, in anti-Jewish violence November 10.

The German companies submitted claims to foreign—primarily British—underwriters who carried re-insurance on the hundreds of Jewish synagogues, stores and homes which were burned, looted and damaged in what Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels called "spontaneous demonstrations" after a Jewish boy killed a German diplomat in Paris.

Jews themselves were ordered to repair the damages, but the government has seized the insurance claims to be applied to a $400,000,000 fine against Jews for the slaying of Ernst vom Rath, secretary in the Paris embassy, by Herschel Grynszpan.

It was learned the foreign companies would resist paying the claims on various grounds, including that adequate police protection was lacking for the insured places and that the outbreaks were organized with connivance of the government.

No American firms held re-insurance on the damaged Jewish property, as far as was known here.

EFFORT TO FREEZE HIS BABY DENIED

Father Says Mother Was Uninterested.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Denying his wife's charges that he attempted to freeze her baby on an automobile trip from New York, Joseph Delucca, 21, today testified in district court that the mother was "more interested in becoming a Texas cowgirl than in the child."

Delucca said that when the couple reached New York on a trip to Florida his wife insisted she wanted to go to Texas to become "a cowgirl."

The young husband was charged with assault with intent to murder on the accusations of his wife that he allowed the baby to remain naked in the back seat of an automobile on a trip from New York while he gave all his attention to a pet monkey. Delucca's mother was charged with being an accessory.

Judge Chandler, continuing the hearing until tomorrow, declared "it is perfectly apparent none of the principals wanted the child."

Thrift Is Urged On Those Aided By Wage Law

Thrift must be practiced by wage earners if the wage-hour law is to be effective, Herbert N. Fell, executive secretary of the Thrift & Security Foundation, of Washington, D. C., declared here last night.

Fell, who attended a meeting of the Southern States Industrial Council, said that "if future salary increases are spent immediately the cost of living will rise in proportion and nobody will be benefited."

Purpose of the foundation is to promote an educational campaign designed to encourage thrift. "It is the duty of a man who gets an increase to save that money," Fell continued. "That is the only way he can be fair to the man who doesn't get an increase. If money is saved it produces interest rates as well as goods at lower prices."

The foundation indorses five methods for securing personal independence in old-age security. They are savings bank deposits, United States Savings Bonds, life insurance policies, building and loan association and credit unions.

"We will never have anything but labor unrest until wage earners save a portion of their pay," Fell explained.

plea for presents with a purpose

Keepsakes and mementos are alright in their way—but how about a present with a purpose? Remembrances and gay gestures may be flattering for a day—but how about a gracious gift on purpose?

Do you, perchance, seek a winning gift for husband, wife, or friend? And, do you find yourself wavering between fussy frivolity and functional good sense? Then, consider this for a moment:

Out of the life of the average man—at least one-half of his waking hours are spent in his office, whereas women spend at least two-thirds of their time in their homes.

Does not this suggest a present with a purpose—is not the useful gift the master-thought of all?

Yes, home is where the heart is—and so is his office. And the world is full of such numbers of wonderful and practical things for both.

The giftware, for example, that ever lends such glamour to a hostess, the gadgets for the kitchen, the gewgaws for a host, or a matching pen and pencil, or a set for his desk, or a radio, phonograph and records, or a camera and films, or the modern electrical helpmates such as toasters, coffee-makers, refrigerators, washers, irons, vacuum cleaners—a complete electrical kitchen.

What a pleasure to know that the gift that you wrap will never, never wear out its welcome. That's what is meant by a present with a purpose. It's a gift proofed against guesswork—geared for the good life.
